

4515 Regent St.,
Philadelphia.

March 31, 1914.

Dear Miss Butler,

Your card of the 28th that your train would not arrive in Philadelphia this evening until 7.44 if on time, was received yesterday. As I wrote to Professor Needham on the 28th, I have an engagement for this evening and so will not be able to see you at this time, much to my regret.

If you have any time to see me at the hotel tomorrow morning, I shall be glad to see you then. If you will write a message on the enclosed card and mail it this evening, I should receive it at my home tomorrow morning between 8 and 8.30. If the message bids me come to the hotel, I shall do so at whatever time you designate. On second thought, I enclose an addressed envelope instead of a card, as more likely to be included in the first morning delivery.

Hoping that I may have the pleasure of meeting you,

Yours truly

Philip P. Calvert

Dear Miss Boston,

four cards of the 28th

that your train would not arrive in Philadelphia this evening until 7:44 if on time was received yesterday. As I wrote to Professor Packham on the 28th, I have an engagement for this evening and so will not be able to see you at this time, much to my regret.

If you have any time to see me at the Hotel tomorrow morning, I shall be glad to see you then. If you will write a message on the enclosed card and mail it this evening, I should receive it at my home tomorrow morning between 8 and 9.30. If the message bids me come to the hotel, I shall do so at whatever time you desire etc. On second thought, I enclose an addressed envelope instead of a card, as more likely to be included in the first morning delivery. Hoping that I may have the pleasure of