IOWA ROAD BUILDERS'

CYCLONE SCOUTING REPORT

Big, rugged, hard-hitting—those are the words that fit Kansas State, both on offense and defense.

Vince Gibson likes to start his offense from the I-formation and then shift to the split or pro-set formation. He will run power lead plays that will feature quick pitches to the outside. Quarterback Dennis Morrison generally favors Isaac Jackson when he wants to pitch.

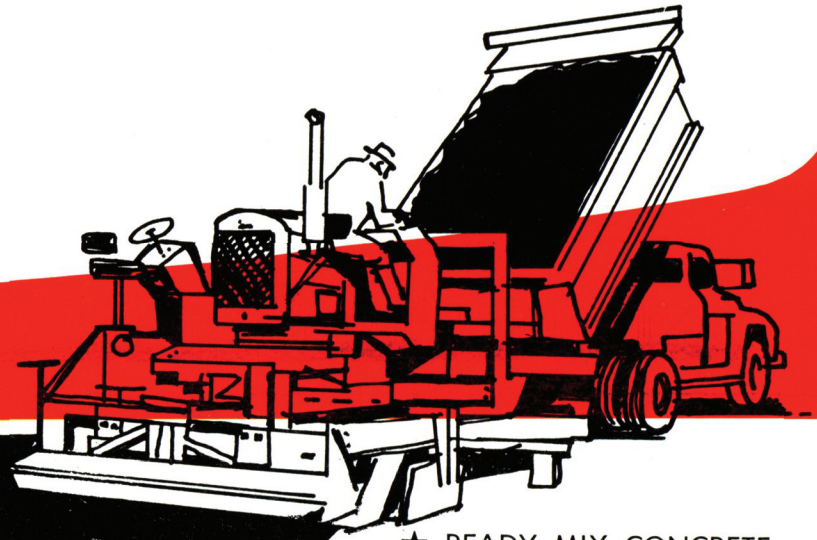

Kansas State is predominately a passing team and that means the Wildcats will throw into every situation. Morrison, who holds most of the K-State and Big Eight records, will be mainly a drop back thrower but will use the pass-run option. They throw under the coverage a lot and make good use of flood and delay patterns.

Morrison and Jackson are the big offensive threats with all the receivers being dangerous.

In short yardage situations, the Wildcats will go to the wishbone offense.

Defensively the Wildcats have returned to a 50 defense that features Roger Stucky as nose guard, Greg Jones as a linebacker, and Ron Coppenberger at the safety man. The entire line backing corps, though, is rated as outstanding.

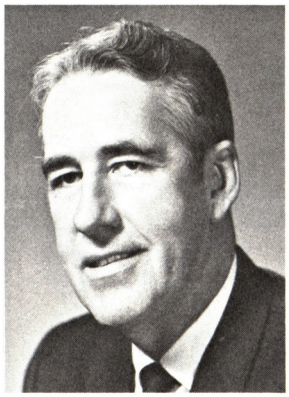

The Wildcats seldom stunt. They use a basic zone against passes and figure to simply carry the battle to the opponent on every play.

CYCLONES SEEK WIN OVER WILDCATS

Last week is forgotten and the only thing on the minds of the Iowa State football players now is winning the Parents Day game over Kansas State this afternoon.

That is no small chore, either.

To a man, however, the Cyclones are determined to get a new winning streak going and to keep right on winning. To start that streak they must win today.

Kansas State, a physically powerful team that likes to feature the passing of Dennis Morrison, is coming into Ames fresh from one of its best and most exciting victories of the season—a 20-19 win over Kansas. The Wildcats could have lost that one late but whipped the Jayhawks' effort to win with a two point conversion.

Isaac Jackson is the top running back for the Wildcats and is one of the best in a conference that features great backs.

Morrison has become such a fine passer at Kansas State that Lynn Dickey's great marks are all in danger—if Morrison has not passed them before now.

Iowa State is approaching the game today with a solid determination to win. After a disappointing contest in a losing effort at Colorado, the Cyclones have had a week of hard work to get ready for the Wildcats.

The week of lay-off before the Colorado game permitted the long list of Cyclone injuries to shrink. Only Henry Lewis was badly battered at Boulder and he may be seeing only limited action today.

The Cyclones lead in the K-State Series by 31-21-3 and would like nothing better than to stretch that margin today. A year ago Iowa State won by a 24-0 count. The last time Kansas State played in Ames, the Wildcats had a shutout, too, 17-0.

The game today honors parents of Iowa State students and special guests will be the parents of Cyclone athletes.

Going into the game today the Cyclones are sold out for their final three home football games. In 1970 the Cyclones had their first sellout against Nebraska. This will mark the first time that the entire home conference schedule has been played before sell out crowds.

Although he missed the 100-yard mark by two yards against Colorado, Mike Strachen, sophomore from Miami, Fla., continues to run at a record pace for the Cyclones. He has gained 544 yards so far in four games, a pace that will be good for 1,496 yards if he maintains it through the rest of the year. That would be 180 yards better than the rushing record George Amundson established last year.

The Cyclones will be on the road at Kansas next week. After that they will return for games against Oklahoma and Nebraska to end the home season.

IOWA STATE UNIVERSITY

Iowa State University is a broad-based university with specific interests in science, the humanities, agriculture, engineering, home economics and veterinary medicine. It was established by the General Assembly of Iowa in 1858. The institution belongs to the people of Iowa and is governed by the State Board of Regents, which also governs the University of Iowa at Iowa City and the University of Northern Iowa at Cedar Falls.

Iowa State has three major functions: first, it is a teaching institution, offering a wide variety of courses on both undergraduate and graduate levels; second, it is a center for research where scientists open new frontiers of knowledge through their investigations; third, it is a service institution reaching out to all parts of the state through extension services whose programs embrace agriculture, industry, community and home.

Iowa State attracts undergraduate students who have done better than the national average on standard tests, and whose previous academic records generally have been high.

The University is fully accredited by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. It is a member of the Association of American Universities, the Council of Graduate Schools in the United States, and the American Council of Learned Societies, all three of which invite only a selected group of outstanding institutions to membership.

The University is organized into seven colleges: Agriculture, Education, Engineering, Home Economics, Sciences and Humanities, Veterinary Medicine and the Graduate College. In addition, the Technical Institute offers education in chemical industries technology, electronics technology, construction technology and mechanical technology.

The Campus

The main campus and recreation areas cover approximately 1,000 acres. During the century since the campus was first planned, the rolling prairie has been carefully landscaped so that buildings are now set in a natural park. Contained here are many varieties of trees and shrubs which serve as an outdoor laboratory for students in botany, forestry, horticulture, and landscape architecture.

The campus has more than 100 major structures on it, valued at $188 million on a cost basis including equipment. Approximately $84 million of this investment is in buildings for auxiliary and affiliated operations such as residence halls, the Memorial Union, the buildings of the Ames Laboratory of the United States Atomic Energy Commission, the C. Y. Stephens Auditorium and the James H. Hilton Coliseum. All were built without use of Iowa state tax funds. Of the more than $104 million in classroom, laboratory, library, office and service buildings and equipment, somewhat more than $92 million represents Iowa state tax funds, and the remainder came from federal grants. Thus, Iowa State tax funds have provided about half of the total cost of structures and equipment on campus.

The Iowa State Center

Iowa State University is presently building the Iowa State Center as a focal point for many of the University's cultural, recreational and continuing education activities. The $4.9 million C. Y. Stephens Auditorium was opened in September 1969. This magnificent theater and music hall seats approximately 2,700, and was financed entirely from gifts. The $8.1 million James H. Hilton Coliseum, financed primarily by student fees, was completed in 1971. It seats 14,000 for student convocations, arena-type entertainment presentations, graduation ceremonies, indoor athletic events and other events requiring extensive indoor space. Construction of a 400-seat Little Theater costing $900,000 has begun. This unit and the fourth building of the Center, a continuing education building which will house the many conferences, seminars, meetings and short courses held on campus each year, will be financed by gifts and grants.

ISU Aerospace Department acquires

ROCKET ENGINES

Two important pieces of rocket propulsion equipment have been added to the teaching inventory in the department of aerospace engineering at Iowa State University. They are a second stage liquid propellant engine used in the Tital III satellite launch vehicle and a mock-up of a third stage solid propellant motor used in the Minuteman III ICBM.

The gifts were arranged by the Aerojet Liquid Rocket Company and the Aerojet Solid Propulsion Company, both of Sacramento, Calif., manufacturers of the rocket engines for the United States Air Force. The Air Force made the donations from surplus material.

"Both rockets will be used as a part of the department of aerospace engineering's educational program in propulsion. The units are displayed in such a manner that the students are able to see all of the hardware in an exploded view and all parts are labeled. Individual functions are explained by the instructor," said Dr. R. F. Brodsky, head of the department of aerospace engineering.

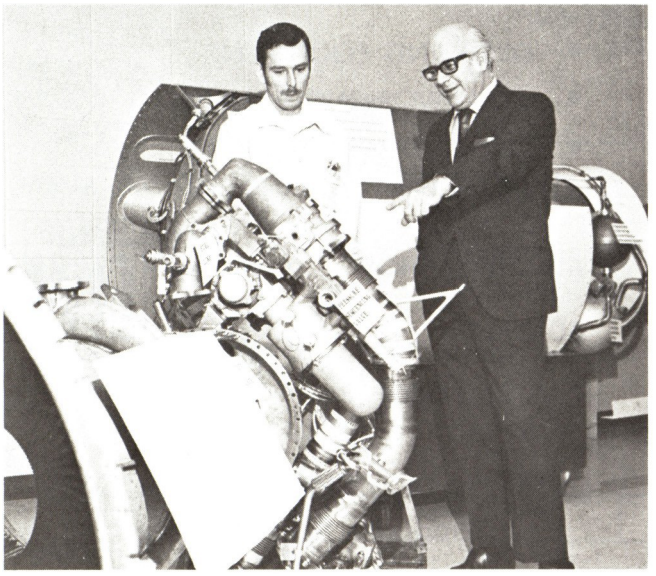

The Titan engine is used in the Titan III launch vehicle and is similar to those used in the Tital II ICBM and in the Gemini program. Produced by Aerojet Liquid Rocket Company, it has a 100,000-pound thrust with propellants consisting of nitrogen tetroxide as oxidizer and AeroZINE-50 as fuel. The propellants are hypergolic, meaning they ignite upon mixture and need no other igniter. The propellants are turbine pump fed, with the turbine powered by gases produced in a separate gas generator utilizing the main engine propellants. Thrust vector control is achieved by swiveling the main thrust chamber assembly, while roll control is obtained from a small nozzle utilizing turbine exhaust gases.

The thrust chamber and initial one-third of exhaust nozzle are cooled regeneratively by the fuel as it is piped through the system to absorb heat.

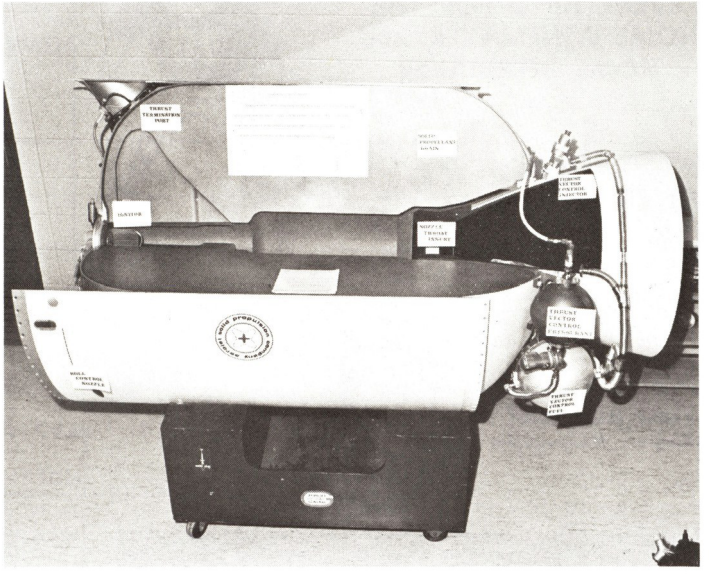

The gift was arranged by Ray Stiff, president of Aerojet Liquid Rocket Co., Sacramento, Calif., and Bruce Shewmaker, his assistant. The engine was used in Air Force training programs until it was recently declared surplus.

The Minuteman III third stage motor is now being used on the latest version of the Minuteman ICBM. A solid rocket producing a thrust of 34,000 pounds, it contains several novel features, including thrust termination blow-out ports, liquid injection thrust vector control incorporated in its single nozzle, and a roll control system using gases produced by a separate gas generator system.

This gift was arranged by Richard Cottrell, president of Aerojet Solid Propulsion Company, Sacramento, Calif., producer of Minuteman engines for the Air Force. The unit given to the department of aerospace engineering was used in Air Force training programs until it was declared surplus.

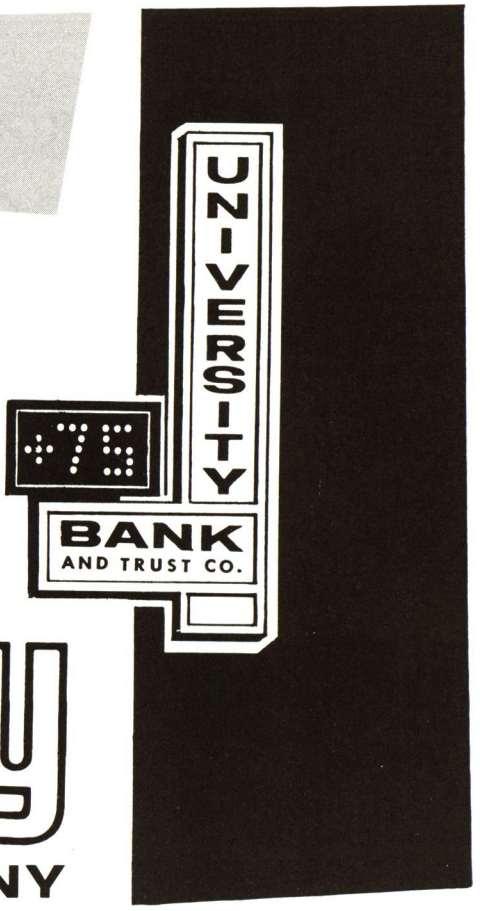

This is the second stage engine for the Air Force Tital III launch vehicle, which is used to place a variety of satellites into orbit. Liquid fueled engines for the Titan are produced by Aerojet Liquid Rocket Company, Sacramento, Calif. At right is Dr. R. F. Brodsky, ISU department head; at left is Steven Russell, Graduate Research Assistant.

This is a mockup of a Minuteman III third stage motor, used in the latest version of the Air Force Minuteman ICBM. It is a solid fuel rocket motor produced by the Aerojet Solid Propulsion Company, Sacramento, Calif.

Laguna Colonnade Hardtop Coupe

The new 1973 Chevelle Laguna. Good news, Chevelle fans. Now you can move up to more car without leaving the make you love most. You can move up to the new 1973 Laguna.

Laguna is a new kind of Chevelle, the top of the line. It has a special front, a special rear and a special interior.

The distinctive front is made mostly of a material called urethane that resists dents and dings. Styled right into the front end is the new improved front bumper system that retracts on minor impact and helps cushion the shock.

Inside there are rich-looking fabrics, wood-grain vinyl accents, a soft-rim color-coordinated steering wheel, map pockets and other luxurious appointments.

Laguna, like other '73 Chevelles, has the new Colonnade hardtop roof design, power flow-through ventilation, front disc brakes, and more rear seat leg room than ever before.

The 1973 Laguna. A new and better way to see the NCAA.

Chevrolet. Building a better way to see the U.S.A.

Chevrolet

Enjoy the game. And remember to buckle up on the way home.

About Kansas State University

Kansas State University was serving the youth of Kansas even befor the "iron horse" joined the east coast to the west coast. Here was an educational institution dedicated to the proposition that "A man's reach should exceed his grasp"—he should be able "to look farther than his eyes could see."

Though today's Space Age student faces a frontier much different from the one faced by his counterpart of a hundred years ago, the excitement of learning remains the same. Education has always been an adventure for those who plan for tomorrow today.

K-State is ready to meet the challenge of the future and looks to the day when, in the words of President McCain, it can promise: "Show me any youth in our state with demonstrated ability to succeed in one of our courses and we shall make it possible for him to attend the University regardless of his financial circumstances."

During the past decade, K-State's physical plant has more than doubled in size. Hand in hand with the physical expansion, a marked growth in emphasis upon culture, scholarship, and research has taken place.

Indicative of the changing status of the institution was the authority given by the Board of Regents in April of 1956 to offer the Bachelor of Arts degree. Then, in 1959, came the action of the Kansas Legislature which officially established K-State as a university.

Kanas State University is proud of its heritage as a land-grant university. It was founded February 16, 1863, under the provisions of the Morrill Act, which had just recently been signed by President Abraham Lincoln.

In the hundred years since its founding the University has developed more than 50 departments integrated under Colleges of Agriculture, Architecture and Design, Arts and Sciences, Commerce, Education, Engineering, Home Economics, and Veterinary Medicine. The instruction offered has changed with the economy of Kansas, from primarily agricultural toward a more diversified and industrial society. In recent years course requirements have been broadened to supplement specialized vocational training with more liberal education.

Research carried on at the University has benefited every person in Kansas. This added income in a single wheat crop from the improved varieties and cropping practices developed by University scientists has been estimated to more than cover the entire cost of the University throughout its history. The menace of blackleg that once took one out of every 10 calves born in the Southwest has been reduced to little more than a nuisance with the aid of a vaccine prepared at the University in 1914. More recently, cities in Kansas preparing for industrial development have benefited from analyses of their situations by a professional survey service of the University.

The master's degree is offered in 73 departments and the Doctor of Philosophy in 26 fields. For the past 15 years, more than 1,000 degrees have been conferred on young men and women each year in over 100 separate scientific, social, and agricultural fields.

Accredited by all appropriate national and regional associations, K-State retains the value of a small college with the advantages of a major university. Noted for its outstanding faculty of national and international reputation, nearly half the teaching and research staff has the highest degree possible to earn —the doctorate.

Iowa State University Department of Intercollegiate Athletics Recognizes With Appreciation the following Iowa Automobile Dealers

Twenty-one Iowa automobile dealers are playing a big part in promoting the Iowa State sports program this year. These fans—and they are rabid backers of all forms of athletic activity—provide the use of automobiles to the department throughout the year. Their program permits Iowa State to make more efficient use of its funds. The department of intercollegiate athletics is deeply grateful to these sports-minded boosters.
