The BOMB of 1951

This year you'll find your Bomb is arranged quite differently than it has been in the past few years. We've tried to show the events of the year in the order of their occurrence.

In the next few pages you'll see the theme of the book develop. This has been carried through the Bomb by our artist and engravers to each of the seasonal division pages.

To find these division pages easily, just grasp all the pages and fan them so that you can see a part of each page. You will see on some pages a full length strip of blue cross-hatching. These mark the seasonal division pages.

We have placed a contents page on the front end-sheet since that page is usually the one that you see when you open the cover. In addition there is an abbreviated index on each division page and in the back of the book, three separate indexes. If you appear in the book, you should find your name and the page numbers of your appearance in the general index.

"Lo! . . . I come to the sacred planting . . . Lo! . . . The tender shoot breaks through the ground . . . Lo! . . . I reap the bountiful harvest . . . Lo! . . . There is joy in my house."

This saga chant of the Osage Indian is symbolized in the four seasons which Christian Petersen has portrayed in the Memorial Union fountain. Its Indian women are showing the maize which is America's original bread-corn. The first woman lays the kernel in the soil. The second woman cultivates the new plant during summer. The third Indian woman is reaping the harvest and the fourth rests with her child in her arms and her song is full of the thought in the last line of Osage chant.

These Indian women gracing the Memorial Union fountain make up one of the many works created by Iowa State's sculptor-in-residence, Christian Petersen.

Mr. Petersen first came to Iowa State College in 1934 after his design for the Dairy Industry court was accepted. His work was so enthusiastically received that he was asked to remain at Iowa State as a faculty member.

Born in Dyybol, Bank., N. Sleevig, Denmark on February 25, 1885, Mr. Petersen came to the United States with his parents at the age of nine. The family migrated to America partly because of the compulsory four-year military program there. Denmark was then under German domination.

Mr. Petersen was fond of drawing as a boy and after he had finished his education, he worked days and attended several art night schools in eastern United States. Before he was thirty, the sculptor was reputedly one of the top three steel engravers in the country. The well-known engraver and designer of medals and medallions left his profession to turn sculptor. Many of his works in both engraving and sculpturing have, since then, been exhibited and sold in the East and Midwest.

Listed in "Who's Who in Art," Iowa State's sculptor believes that art is the subject of understanding and enlightenment. Mr. Petersen's grasp

"Through the four seasons" is the theme given to the Bomb by the Union fountain. This work by Christian Petersen has an interesting history.

The 1937 Veishea presented the pool part of the present fountain. It was enhanced by three plumes of water—one at each end as now and one in the middle.

When Mr. Petersen saw this for the first time, he was struck with the need for a different treatment of the pool. After much thought and discussion with interested men on campus, he slowly formed an idea of presenting a study of corn using Indians as the human interest in the group. He wanted to show these native American products in combination.

A friend of Mr. Petersen's while doing some bibliography work came across the Osage chant telling of the seasons. It fitted the different ideas perfectly and formed the thought of the group. The four Indian women show the different seasons and the work done in each as told in the chant. It was concerned with the life cycle of the corn plant and its relationship to the Indians—and on a broader level—how man's actions are governed by the the cyclic passage of time.

The four seasons shown in the Union Fountain occur year after year regardless of man's desire. Tied to student life here at Iowa State, the four Indians are symbolic in a double way. They may stand for the four levels of learning most students pass through during their stay at Iowa State. Again the four seem to symbolize the passage of the quarters of a school year as we have shown them in this book.

of reality instills the expression of life in each piece so simply that it can be understood by all. Critics have often said that he expresses what he thinks and sees in the most direct way.

Nearly all of his works are a result of personal experience. He sees emotion and interprets it in a way that is understandable to anyone. The unpretentious sculptor cares little about personal affairs where his work is concerned. He enjoys this type of work because of its constant challenge. Sculptoring is his way of expressing life.

Christian Petersen enjoys creating sculptures that show the different facets of life as he sees them. A study of his art will prove he plans a pleasing design as well as one that expresses an idea or thought or emotion.

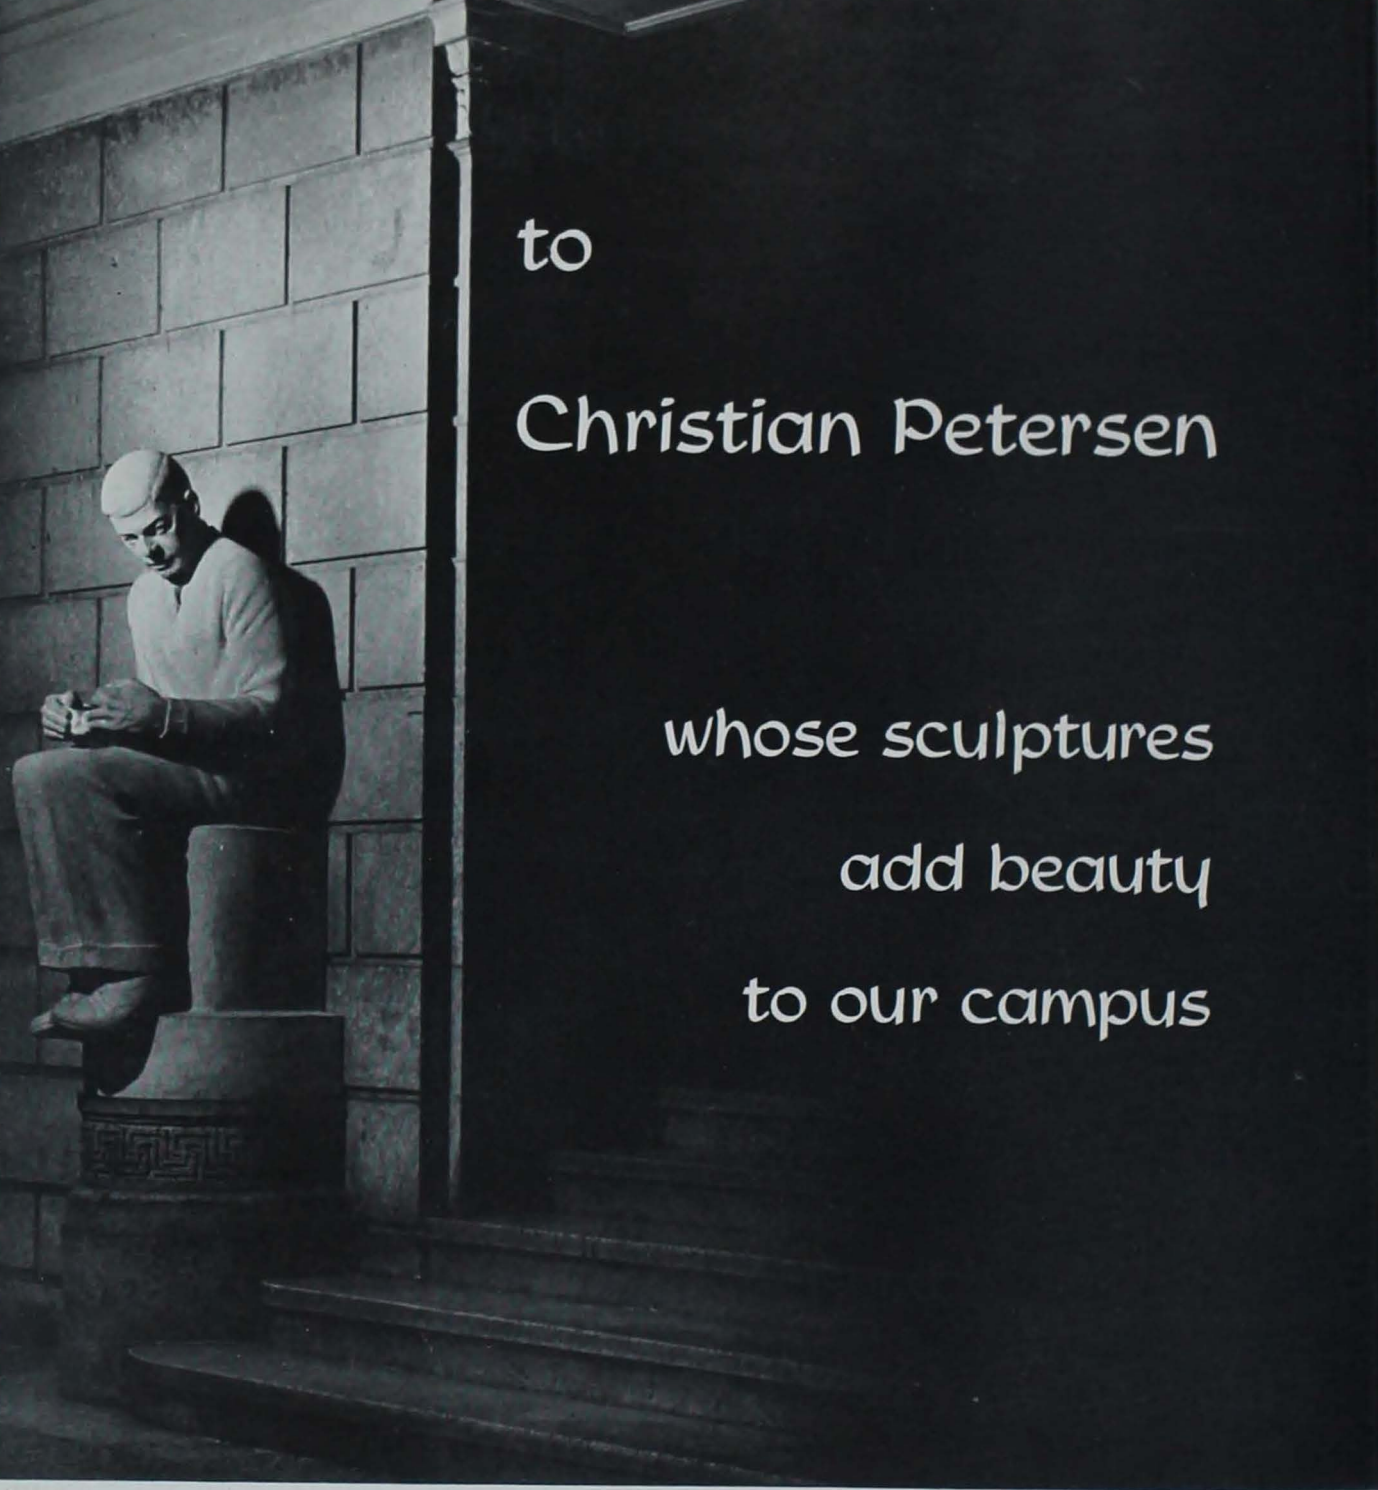

The quiet, hard working sculptor's opinion of art is that it must be honest. Mr. Petersen says, "There's no room for anything but truth since it's a reflection of life itself to a degree and especially a reflection of contemporary life."

Mr. Petersen's first commissioned work on the Iowa State campus was the Dairy Industry Court. He has sculptured his campus works during times when he was not busy teaching his full classes in sculpturing.

The two students carved in stone in the Iowa State Library lobby are his second pieces in stone on the campus, the Memorial Union fountain being the first. He is now completing new figures to be used on Beech Avenue on the east side of the college entrance. Says Mr. Petersen, "These will be used to create an invitation to enter the college grounds. To me this is far better than a gate, for a gate excludes and offers no invitation." This group is his latest in stone. Most of the other works on campus are in terra cotta.

When asked which of his many works he considers the best, Mr. Petersen usually answers with, "My next piece."

Never too busy to see or speak with anyone, you'll always get a smile in greeting from the tall, impressive, Christian Petersen. The man with the sincere,"I'm glad to see you back again."

Christian Petersen, Iowa State's sculptor-in-residence at work on one unit of his limestone group soon to be placed near the Beech Avenue entrance to the campus. This is the center group of the model shown on page 15. The entire work will show the passerby an idea of student life and give him an invitation to enter.

An invitation to knowledge seems to be the message of Mr. Petersen's host and hostess at the stairway entrance in the lobby of the library. Originally there were to have been ornate ironwork lamps in the spots where this tasteful pair of stone students are seated.

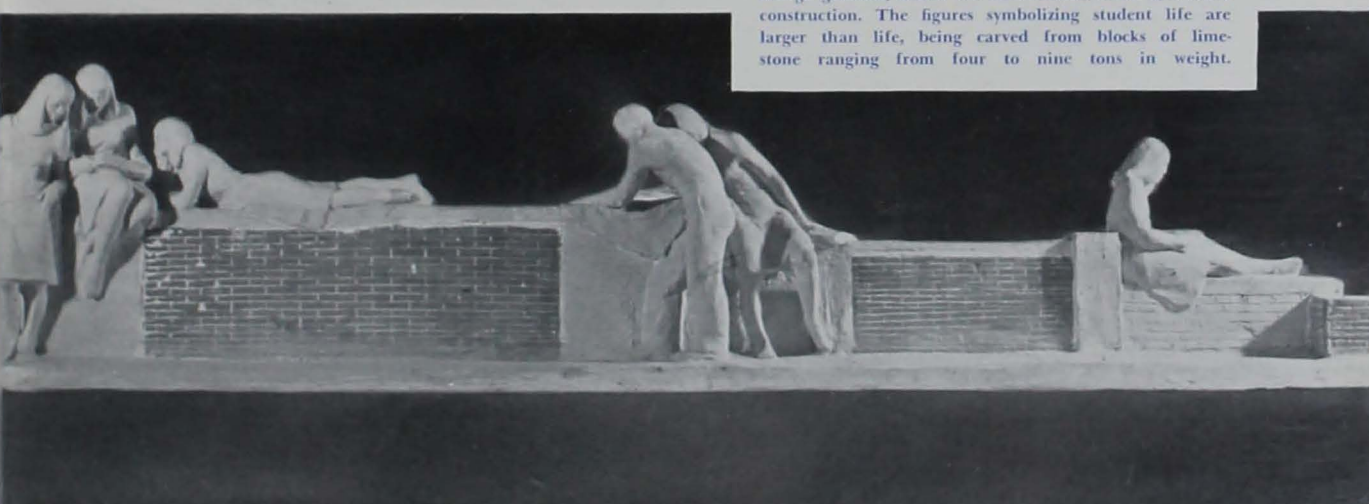

In Veterinary Court, Mr. Petersen shows the sympathetic feeling of the veterinarian as he helps sick animals and the confidence and faith generated in animals by the good veterinarian. The panel shows the relationship between work of veterinarians and human health either through protecting food sources or in the production of vaccines and serums from many animals.

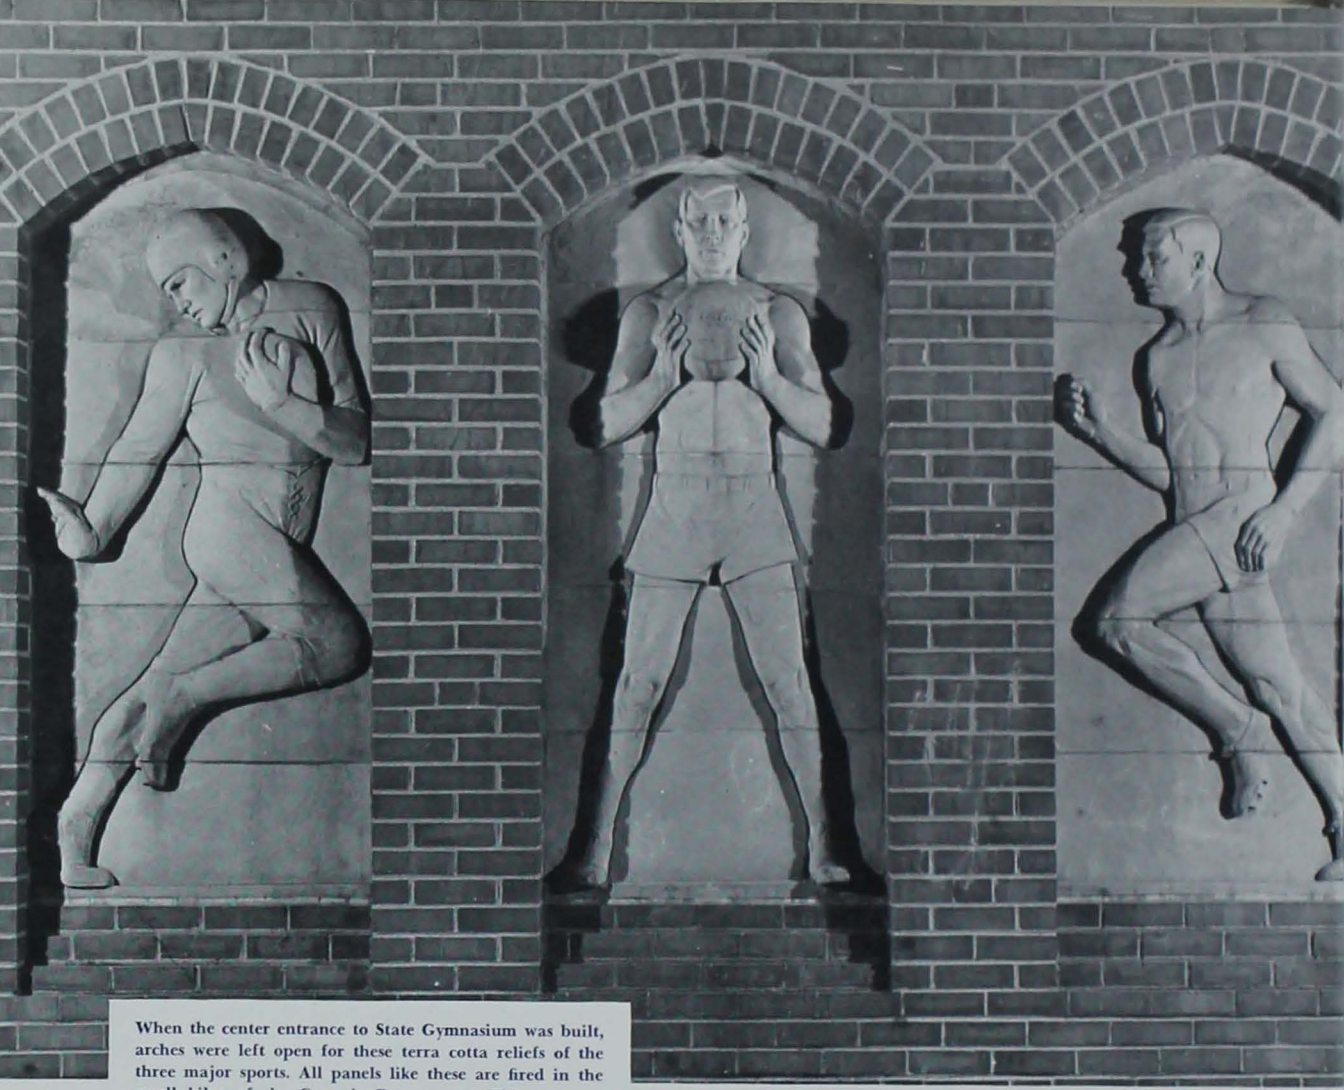

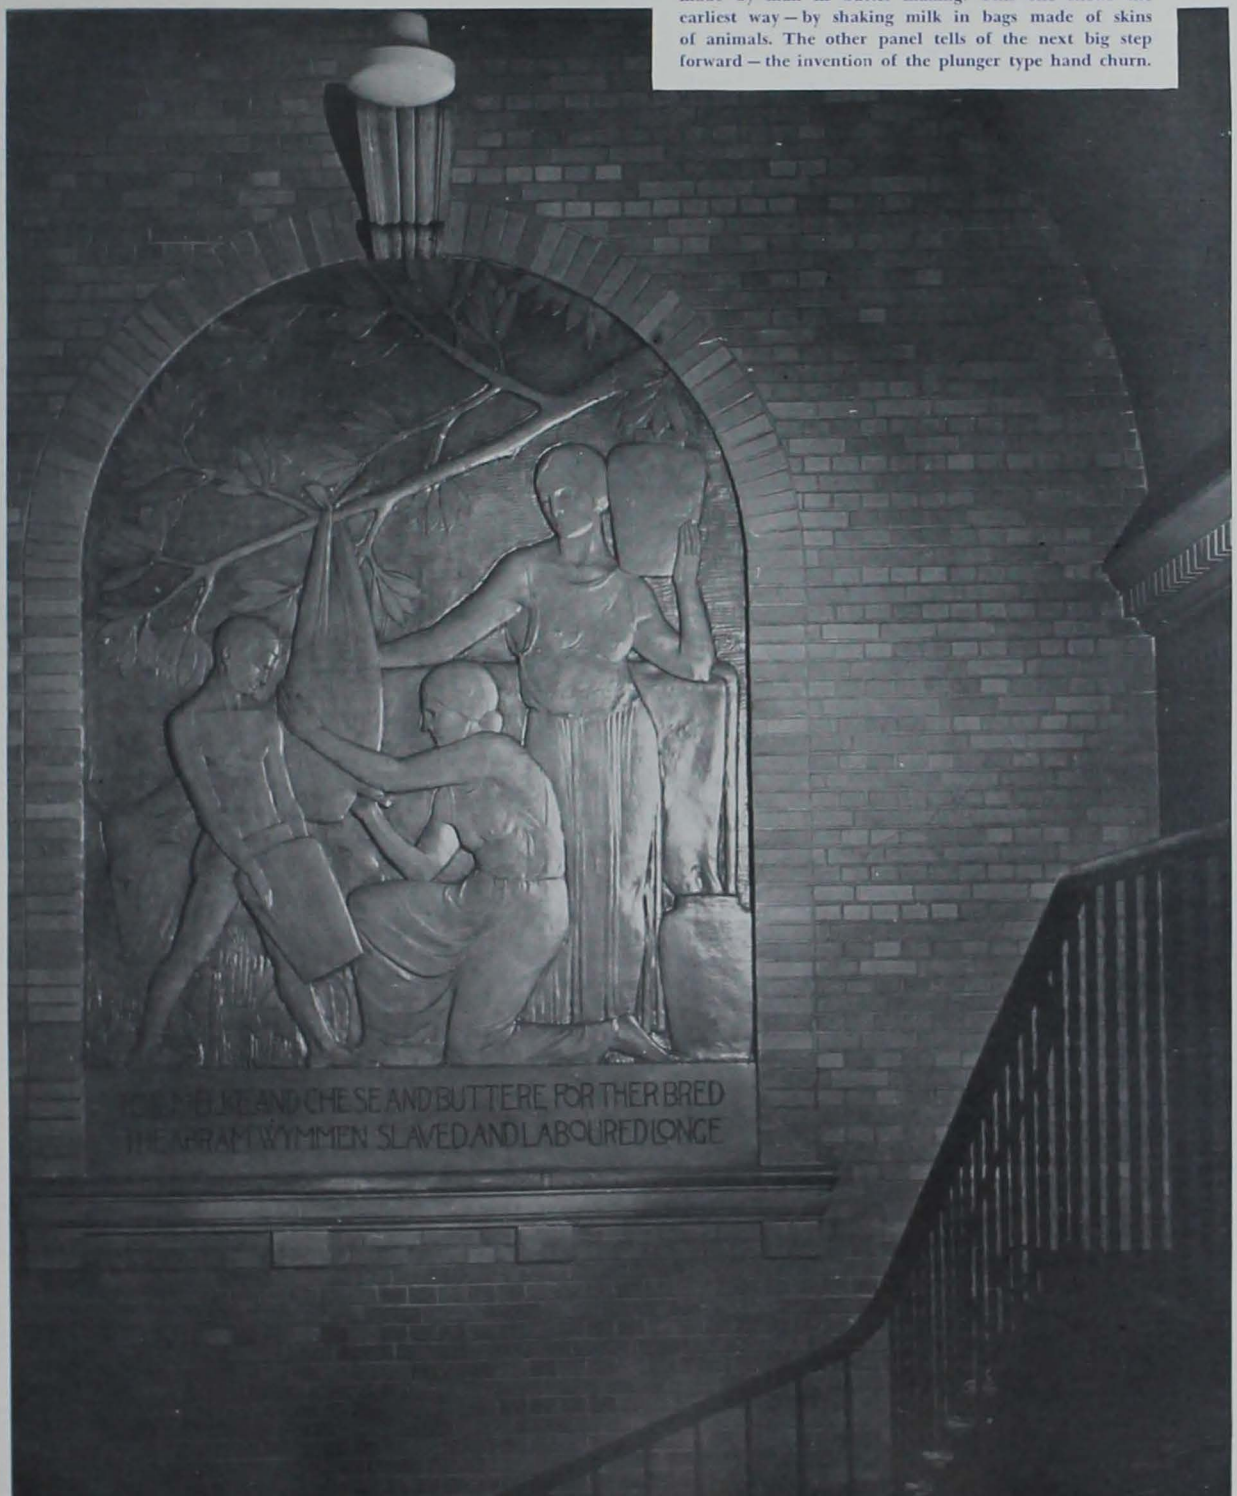

Here is the central part of the fountain and pool panel of the Dairy Industry court. In addition to this panel there are flanking ones telling different phases in dairy industry. These are in terra cotta fired without glaze to the point of vitrification, making them harder and longer-lived than most brick in buildings.

This plaster model of the group to be placed on the west side of Beech Avenue at its entrance to the college grounds, shows the combination stone and brick construction. The figures symbolizing student life are larger than life, being carved from blocks of limestone ranging from four to nine tons in weight.

When the center entrance to State Gymnasium was built, arches were left open for these terra cotta reliefs of the three major sports. All panels like these are fired in the small kilns of the Ceramic Department. This accounts for the lines or cuts in the panels. Mr. Petersen has to cut his clay in sections in order to fit his work in the kilns.

Inside the entrance of the Dairy Industry building are two large plaster panels showing the two early steps made by man in butter making. This one shows the earliest way — by shaking milk in bags made of skins of animals. The other panel tells of the next big step forward — the invention of the plunger type hand churn.

Like a jewel set in the triangle of walks leading to the Home Economics building, Mr. Petersen's pool and its playing children attract all who see it. Of terra cotta and surrounded with flowers and turf, this small work lets people know how Mr. Petersen feels one should approach the subject of child development and guidance.

BOMB BEAUTIES

In pace with the times, WOI-TV let thousands of Iowa families watch as DeWayne Cuthbertson, yearbook editor at Iowa State Teachers College and Dan Miller, yearbook editor at the State University of Iowa, made the final choice of the four Bomb Beauties on live television. In contrast to the usual, they came to Iowa State and made their choice after getting acquainted with the 12 finalists chosen from 80 candidates by Dean of the Science Division, Harold V. Gaskill; Head of the Applied Art Department, Marjorie S. Garfield and Charles Benn, TV and motion-picture photographer for the Extension and Information services at Iowa State College.

The Bomb Beauties of 1951 were presented by Herb Pownall, Bomb editor, who believed that the judges of beauty should see the lovelies and know their personalities by personal contact to make the best choice – do you agree?

Veishea

Floods of applications . . . long evening meetings . . . many a headache . . . cooperation. Added up with 100,000 visitors, it was Iowa State's 1950 Mid-Century Veishea.

Off to a roaring start with the firing of five aerial bombs, one for each division, Veishea was officially opened at noon, Thursday, May 11.

Crowds gathered on the lawn east of Beardshear to view the opening ceremonies. The long awaited moment came. The Queen of Queens was revealed and crowned by Governor William S. Beardsley. She was brown-haired Joan Ary. Her court consisted of Rosalie Fritz, Barbara Krueger, Marjorie Moore and Patricia Wren.

While the campanile played, the crowd dispersed to various parts of the campus. They had a choice of attending the horse show or the four-act melodrama, "Rags to Riches."

Spectators at the horse show watched the keen competition in the eight classes of the show. The rough riding cowboys in the cow pony class drew special applause.

A concert Thursday night under the stars at Clyde Williams Field opened Jimmy Dorsey and his orchestra's three night stand at Iowa State. The first of the Veishea dances was held in Great Hall, Memorial Union, Thursday evening following the concert.

More than 2,000 spectators lined the banks of Lake La Verne by 9 a.m., Friday to see the canoe races. As the water ceased churning, Kappa Alpha Theta, Roberts Hall, Eta Ward, and the Science faculty teams emerged wet but winners in each of their divisions.

One of the main purposes of Veishea is to show visitors the work done at Iowa State. Each college department displayed its talents at open houses Friday and Saturday.

Meanwhile, burning brightly, the Veisheathon flame was trying to appease the rain gods. United States President Harry S. Truman lit the torch in Ottumwa. The torch, a symbol of higher education, was carried to Des Moines by Don Ferguson via fast convertible. A relay team of 127 students ran it from the steps of the state capitol to Ames.

Taking double precautions against rain, a "Mulathon" was staged between Des Moines and Ames. Four men took turns riding Francis, the mule. Here the torch was carried in the form of "canned heat."

Four vodvil skits were presented Friday and Saturday afternoons. Kappa Kappa Gamma walked off with the Veishea Vodvil trophy with their skit, "Mrs. Murphy vs. the State of Ireland."

"Report to the Nation," the Stars Over Veishea musical review, made its debut Friday evening in a performance under the stars. One hundred students danced and sang songs written by Bill Schall and Bob Morris.

Early Saturday morning thousands of people thronged the parade route on the campus to view the colorful parade. A procession of 76 floats and 12 high school bands made its way through campus exhibiting the efforts of many who had worked most of Friday night on them.

Sigma Nu fraternity won the sweepstakes. Gamma Phi Beta won first place in the women's residence division. Phi Delta Theta and Alumni Hall took first places in their men's residence groups. An aluminum rocket half way through a hoop was constructed by Alumni Hall men. The Horticulture Club received the first place honors in the departmental division. Top place among the organizations went to the NROTC float.

Mid-Century Veishea was enjoyed by more than those who were there in actual attendance. Many watched the various activities in their own homes through the medium of television. This was the first Veishea to be televised. Thus, it was possible for many more to witness the largest student-managed festival in the nation.

Brilliant sprays of fireworks were the finale at both performances of the "Stars Over Veishea" program.

Cardinal Key

Christian Petersen

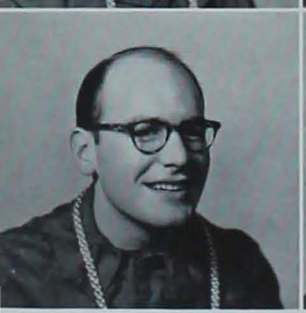

The entire circle of people around the campanile had a quiet, solemn, peaceful look. It might have been the laying of the cornerstone for a new building or the presentation of some high degree, but suddenly the peaceful silence was broken by a resounding whack. One man almost fell on his knees and an entire chorus of voices exclaimed, "My Gosh, he almost broke his back!" Mayhem? No, only a new member being tapped for Iowa State's highest honorary, Cardinal Key.

In April, Cardinal Key, top Iowa State men's honorary, recognized outstanding senior college men with an annual Leadership Day banquet. This was an indication to the men invited that they were possible candidates for membership in this organization.

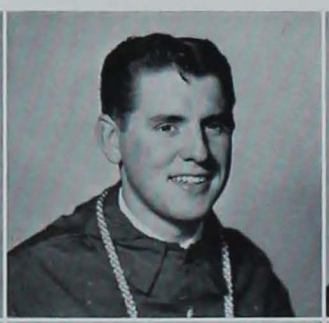

During Veishea, Cardinal Key actives acknowledged 15 new members at their traditional public tapping ceremony. Candidates were selected on the basis of their qualities in leadership, character, scholarship, and service to the college.

Mortar Board

As the last notes of the carillon concert died away, black-robed members of Motar Board began to mingle with the crowd gathered around the campanile. A sudden scream of surprise and loud applause told that the first member of this year's Mortar Board had been found. The new members, chosen on the basis of leadership, scholarship and service, were then capped until but one cap remained. Lois Smith received this last cap, designating her president.

On February 1 Motar Board sponsored their annual Women's Day. Dr. Evelyn Duvall, consultant for the national council on family relations, was guest speaker at the convocation. Other projects of the group included the candlelight induction service for freshman women, participation in Religion in Life Week and cap and gown sales.

Alpha Zeta

Spring initiation of Alpha Zeta honorary was highlighted by a speech given by John Cunningham, co-founder of the fraternity.

Thirty-nine men, selected from the junior and senior classes, were initiated on Dec. 7, following a week of pledgeship which included wearing levis, bright red neckerchiefs and straw hats along with the usual Alpha Zeta symbols. Featured fall banquet speaker was Prof. Bethel S. Pickett.

Tau Beta Pi

As we watch the brown and white robed men and their antics on the steps of Beardshear, few of us realize the honor of being a member of this organization.

Members of "Tau Bate" are selected from the top one-fifth of the seniors and the upper one-eighth of the junior engineers. The group this year awarded Jane Frudden the second national Tau Beta Pi women's award to be given to an Iowa State woman.

"Four pounds of dates, two quarts of eggs, and one cup candied fruit" . . . these were the fruitcake baking minutes of Phi Upsilon Omicron, national home ec honorary.

This year, the group joined in the Christmas rush in true home ec fashion as they baked and sold fruitcakes during the holiday season. The proceeds of these sales were used for a scholarship for an outstanding freshman or sophomore girl in home economics.

Other of the activities of Phi Upsilon Omicron include sponsorship of a buffet dinner each spring for the actives, alumni, and faculty members; and the co-sponsorship of Home Economics Day with Omicron Nu. President this year was Eleanor Breckenridge and Miss Lenore Sullivan acted as faculty adviser.

Blanched almonds, weighed flour and greased pans all contribute toward good Phi U fruit cake.

Knights of St. Patrick

"Shurr and begorra, me lad, kneel and kiss the Blarney Stone while I knight you with a tap of me shillalah."

The scene isn't Ireland; it's the Memorial Union and the ever popular, traditional Engineers' Ball. The shillalah is a slide rule, and the Blarney Stone is just any piece of stone, although the engineers claim it's of Irish descent.

Presiding over the occasion are the lovely Engineers' Lady and her escort, Saint Pat, an active elected by both the actives and pledges. As the pledges kneel and kiss the Blarney Stone, they are initiated into the honored fold of Iowa State's slide-rule swinging, shamrock-covered Knights of Saint Patrick.

St. Pat's president this year was Willis Shaner, while Prof. James McKean acted as faculty adviser.

Eta Kappa Nu

Mr. Walter T. Wells joined the ranks of ISC graduates who have been made honorary members of Eta Kappa Nu, when he was initiated December 1, 1950. Raymond Valine was initiated on April 26, 1950.

Darrell Reneker, president of Eta Kappa Nu, received recognition for his outstanding scholastic record at the Honors Day Convocation.

Activities for the year included a booth at the Engineer's Carnival, co-sponsoring a technical paper's contest and helping to prepare ISC Engineering Alumni Directory.

Pi Tau Sigma

"Tell me, just how much did you use this book after you graduated?" "How much have you referred to this book in the past year?" These were but two of the questions asked many graduate ME's during Pi Tau Sigma's textbook survey this year.

The members of "Pi Tau," mechanical engineering honorary, not only used their voices and T & AM tactics, but also combined the labors of many hands to turn out the ASME Veishea float and a prize-winning booth for the Engineer's Carnival. President this year was Merle G. Lawson.

Psi Chi

As the girl looked deeply into the boy's eyes, the members held their breaths and crossed their fingers — would he pass? Would he be introspectively eligible?

Thus, Psi Chi, national psychology honorary, selected prospective members during their annual "Whing Ding" at Lynn Fuhrer Lodge.

Among the Psi Chi members' analyses were those offered anyone taking the puzzle or question board tests at the honorary's Veishea open house. Any normal person could take the tests, and it was quite possible that the tests showed the majority of the subjects quite sane.

Pi Mu Epsilon

Pi Mu Epsilon, Iowa State's honorary for mathematical average-raisers, honored their fall and spring initiates with informal banquets this year.

The group also sponsors the Math Club, which holds approximately three meetings each quarter and "The Pi Mu Epsilon Prize in Mathematics." This award is presented to the individual who, in his freshman-sophomore years at Iowa State College, had the highest cumulative quality-point average in six quarters of collegiate level mathematics.

Director for this year was Eleanor Johns, while Ralph Robinson served as the group's faculty adviser.

Sigma Alpha Iota

Black skirts trailing down the aisle, the girls of Sigma Alpha Iota served as ushers for the college concert series. The members, chosen for outstanding musical ability, sponsored Sor-Dor and presented monthly musicals. President of the group this year was Ruth Eshelman.

Phi Mu Alpha

Among the events sponsored by the thirty-two music-minded members of Phi Mu Alpha this year were Sinfonia Sing, the Nelson Eddy concert, the Iowa State-Drake musicale, Christmas faculty serenades and a music department dance. Bob Bell headed the group.

Theta Sigma Phi

A writers' workshop for home ec journalists was one of the activities of Theta Sigma Phi, women's professional journalism honorary. Led by Ellen Pennell the meetings featured photography and writing ideas.

Heading this group were Janet Sutherland, Barbara Allen, Margery Turner, Jeanette Fowler and Katherine Goeppinger.

Sigma Delta Chi

Sigma Delta Chi, men's professional journalism honorary, established an International Journalism Fellowship, sent five members to their national convention and co-sponsored Iowa State's Green Gander humor. Trophies were also provided by the group for the winners of state and national newspaper competition.

Tau Sigma Delta

The Ancients have nothing on these boys. Tau Sigma Delta, honorary fraternity in architecture and the allied arts, encourages majors in their respective fields to strive for perfection. Men who have made good in sculpturing, industrial design, painting, or landscape architecture, are examples for Iowa State's novices.

Phi Eta Sigma

Iowa State's fall quarter freshmen were given a push toward the 4.0 mark this year when members of Phi Eta Sigma, freshman scholastic honorary, passed out study guides in the frosh registration lines.

Heading this honorary, open only to freshmen men with an all-college grade point of 3.5 or better, was Stanley Petrick.

"What's this, Chem E's and chem majors carousing around, dancing, not worrying over late reports?"

"Well, if you say . . . Guess these guys have a right to relax some of the time." And so they do at the monthly Alpha Chi Sigma parties.

Founded as a professional fraternity for all chemical students, Alpha Chi Sigma is probably one of the most active of the national professionals at Iowa State. Dinners, speakers and planning the purchase of a house have been the year's main activities.

Tau Lambda Rho

When a logger or a highway engineer is asked to hand over his brush hook, he does so with a feeling of hesitancy. Not so with Iowa State's future highway builders. To them this means another signature on their badge of membership in Tau Lambda Rho, civil engineering honorary.

Organized to further the friendships made during the CE's summer camps, the group goes one step further and tries to familiarize the underclassmen with the camp. A spring picnic honored the graduating seniors. President this year was Dean Larson.

June Graduation

A few steps, . . . a nod, . . . and college days were memories.

One thousand two hundred graduating seniors, the largest class in Iowa State's 82-year history, ended their truly final exams June 6. Only four days later, which passed quickly with speeches, lines, receptions, processions, meetings, and dinners, the graduates of the 1950 class attended an Alumni Day program and with that, they became "men and women of the world" — Iowa State alumni.

Commencement meant advancement for students who for four years had been squinting through test tubes in chemistry lab, trudging to the library with thick, heavy psych books, and battling heavy eyelids on final week nights. Commencement meant the end of those days as students who spend timeless afternoons at the Union, who hide their books from Friday to Monday, who eat sack lunches to get to football games for a good seat. Commencement meant fulfillment to all students who were impatient to put their learned science to practice.

The first of their final departing steps were taken Sunday night in time to the familiar chiming of the carillon, Ira Schroeder's farewell message from the campanile. This was the procession to the State Gymnasium where Baccalaureate services were held. Rev. Roy E. LeMoine, Director of Religious Education, gave the Baccalaureate message.

The message by President Friley, the printed commencement program, the sight of friends going — each left a different memory for the graduates. All these became college "souvenirs" after each senior had a tight hold on his diploma, a reassuring handshake, and a few steps into his future.

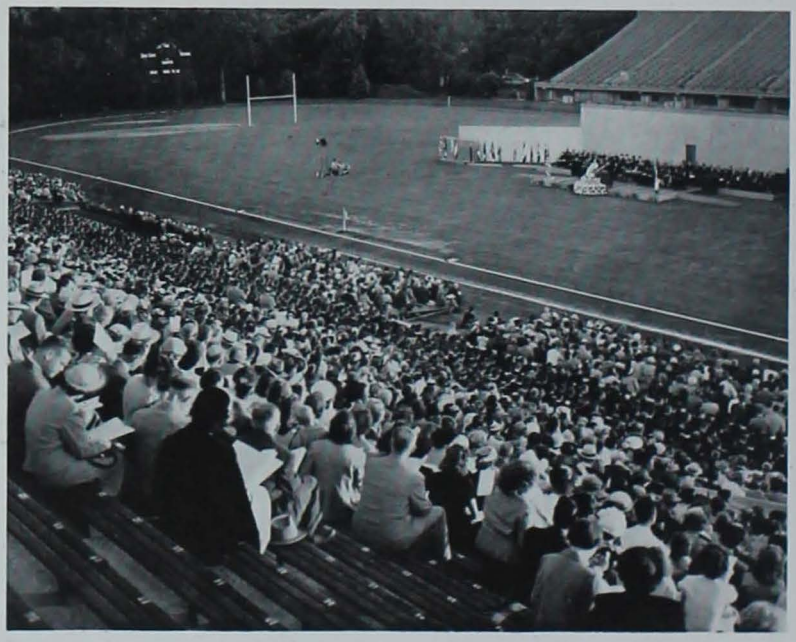

Black-robed seniors mark off football yardages as they file in ready for graduation.

Agronomy Club

Yep, must be that Iowa State cider pouring technique.

Gullies in 1900 — neat, contoured fields in 1950! That idea was part of the background for the trophy-winning Open House at last year's Veishea. Who was responsible for the idea? None other than the American Society of Agronomy — student section. Nor did their successes stop there. In the fall they saw one of their members, Owen Newlin, elected president of the national group.

The local organization met bi-weekly for educational and social programs. Last year it followed the leadership of Russel Pisle, president; James Christy, vice-president; Tom McIntosh, secretary; Thomas Dody, treasurer; Leland Carlisle, parliamentarian; and Wilbur Bennett, program chairman.

Alpha Phi Omega

"We tackle anything," might very well be the slogan of members of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity. They sponsored the first dance of the year on the tennis courts, sold Homecoming and Veishea dance tickets, Christmas seals and handled the March of Dimes "ugly man" contest.

Not only on the campus but in the community you will find the members of Alpha Phi Omega lending their services to such groups as the Boy Scouts. You will also find them assisting in the sale of auto licenses, on the hospital visitation program and draft registration board.

As if this wasn't already enough the fraternity also assisted on plans for the semi-annual national convention of all 226 chapters that was held in Des Moines, December 28, 29, 30.

Fraternity activities were directed by John Stevenson, president.

AVMA

With a patient, the creed of a vet is friendliness — especially if the patient is capable of biting his leg or kicking him in the face. However, not all of the Iowa State vet's time is spent with his books or his patients. Thus, the ISC Student Chapter of the national AVMA gives him the opportunity to extend his friendly feelings on into the activities of the student body.

Armed with the prospects of the annual Vet Medicine Ball, the alumni Homecoming picnic and the various parties and picnics sponsored by the chapter, the vet expectantly approaches the social side of each year's studying. He also gets a kick out of working like a dog on the Veishea dog show.

These future doctors pride themselves in their women's auxiliary and their distinction of being the only division at Iowa State to sponsor the complete honor system. They are also the only division which boasts 100 per cent membership in their professional organization. From dogs to mules, from problems to solutions, these men run their own affairs, study long hours and still find time to relax and enjoy the society of their fellow students.

A book, someone who knows, and a demonstration.

"And down through the chimney with lots of toys . . ." came Saint Nick. The children screamed their joy and the parents smiled their pleasure. The AVMA Christmas party was a success — the children had been surprised.

But this was only one of the family type gatherings sponsored by the group. Exhausted but happy, the vets and their wives or dates attended a variety of picnics and dances throughout the year. The highlight of these was the annual spring dance held at the country club.

However, once a month, the vets left their wives and girls at home and went to hear speeches by noted practicing veterinarians. Among the guest speakers were Dr. John Dewar, president of the Iowa AVMA and Dr. R. C. Klussendorf, assistant executive secretary of the national AVMA. Following the speaker's discussion, the organization convenes for a short business meeting.

President for the first half of the year was William Fennessy. John Bricker succeeded him during February. Leonard Cavanaugh acted as treasurer for the group while Dr. Whitcomb served as the faculty's adviser.

Dairy Plant Operators

Butter, cheese, or ice cream maker; milk plant operator or manager of a dairy plant — four quarters of study in the Dairy Plant Operation program plus 6 months' work in commercial plants qualify scores of students annually for all of these positions.

Students enrolled in the course, since they are on campus only 4 quarters, may be less well-known than others, but they are busy nevertheless. Their schedules consist of both class and laboratory work, the latter including the manufacture of the various milk products and handling of market milk. "Ice Cream and Ices" and "Testing Milk and Milk Products" are two examples of the courses they take.

These men have no departmental club of their own, but are active members of the Dairy Industry Club. At the completion of their 18 months' training here at Iowa State, they officially become Certified Dairy Plant Operators.

Forestry Club

Paul Bunyan, the legend of the West, here at Iowa State? Impossible! But this is just about what the members of Forestry Club produced when they elected John Evans to reign over last Veishea's celebration as "Son of Paul."

Bauer photo

This special day was the time of the forester's year set aside to try to approach the records of the great master forester of all, Paul Bunyan himself. Log burling in Lake LaVerne, wood chopping, tobacco spitting, pole climbing, chain throwing and pulp bolt (small log) heaving contests were all a strenuous part of the day's activities. A prize was also awarded for the longest, thickest, roughest beard.

But, these were mostly the he-man's deeds. For the remainder of the student body and visitors, various exhibits were presented. Sandwiched in between their various entries, the contestants grabbed a sandwich and took their turn showing the crowds the trailer containing all the native Iowa wildlife, the chain saw exhibit, the wood products display and the movie on smoke jumpers.

Heaving the pulp pole, somewhat short for a telephone pole, is some task, even for these big 300 pounders.

Foresters practicing what has been preached in class on the club's 318-acre Holst State Forest tract.

A low fire, a sizzling carcass, a drooling palate, and the thought of a big, juicy slice of elk — these were the thoughts in the minds of Forestry Club members for weeks in advance of their annual game banquet. Originally, the game was contributed by the weapon of some member, but through the years, buck shot was found hard on teeth.

Other less formal get-togethers included fall and spring campfires at Sunset Rock on the Skunk River, and the annual spring hoedown, complete with plaid shirts, sagging pants and aged cider. The country club gave plenty of room to "swing your partner."

Presidents for this year were Art Jensen the first half, followed by Tom Cochran. George W. Thomson served as the group's faculty advisor.

Iowa State Singers

On tour in their black robes, the Singers presented a somber sight, but their vocal selections left audiences much lighter.

The publicity is also a big part of every Singers concert.

Here are Varieties intermission singers, the girls' sextette.

"The OOO-grian race' — that's the password for the day." Professor Eugene Hilligoss, directing Iowa State Singers after a year's absence, found using flagrant errors as passwords for the day a successful method of obtaining polished pronunciation and phrasing in the annual vocal concerts.

Special feature of the winter concert was one of Prof. Hilligoss' own compositions, "Gossip." It was written for the 1948 Singers, but still goes for this year's group, according to the composer.

Towns all over the state were included in the yearly tour made by 70 selected members of the group. Members of the Singers also made up smaller singing groups, including the Varsity Eight, Campus Trio, and girls' sextette.

Besides the winter concert, campus singing groups provided music for the Christmas

The Festival Chorus, directed by Professor Tolbert MacRae, gave their annual presentation of Handel's "Messiah" during Christmas and on March 11 sang Rossini's "Stabat Mater."

The group's officers during the year were: Douglas Aden, president; Gilbert Garton, vice-president; Ruth Van Roekel, secretary; and Owen Newlin, treasurer.

ISSIE

Do you have employment problems? Well, if your troubles at Iowa State are of this nature — switch to Industrial Economics. For, you see, it's the Iowa State Society of Industrial Economists that has organized a new job placement service. Their motto: not a graduating senior without a job.

But, not all their program was business. Bull sessions, good food and a talk by Alan Whitfield, eminent Des Moines attorney, highlighted the group's annual banquet.

Weekly meetings also included talks on the various related phases of industry and economics. President was Hart Williamson.

PR men got quite a lift going to their national convention.

Pershing Rifles

Posting "military guard" on sororities, marching at Veishea and helping present the colors at football games were all a part of the activities of Pershing Rifles actives and pledges this year.

Founded by famed General Pershing, the group is basically a military organization, but to the members it has meant much more than drill and hard work. It meant honors won and the chance to play host to the annual Regimental Assembly of the organization last spring quarter.

Judging Teams

Iowa State's judging teams have again come through with flying colors. The meat judging team won top honors at the American Royal Livestock Show at Kansas City and ranked second at the Chicago International Livestock Exposition.

The poultry judging team made the highest score ever given in production judging at the Midwest Intercollegiate Judging Contest at Chicago. N. E. Wilson, on Iowa State's team, was awarded the only perfect score.

The dairy products judging team proved to be the champion judgers at the Atlantic City Contest. On the team Ed Schuch won the National All-Products, and Bill Sandine, a $1000 scholarship for graduate study.

The livestock judging team showed its skill by placing at the American Royal and International Livestock Expositions. A special team won at the Fort Worth Exposition.

The dairy cattle judging team ranked second in both the American Royal Dairy Show at Kansas City and the National Contest at the Dairy Cattle Congress.

Scabbard and Blade

The Army-Navy merger may be something new in Washington, but here on campus the boys in khaki and blue have been putting their weapons in the same rack for a long time. Scabbard and Blade "Buck" week finds the ROTC, NROTC and AROTC pledges working in real cooperation as they give out with humorous song and drill on and around the steps of Beardshear.

Founded to arouse interest in the various branches of the armed forces, the group this year expanded their program into a planned schedule of tours and lectures covering all of Iowa State's training establishments. Thus, a better understanding and better cooperation have resulted in the college's unified armed forces.

However, activities were not always of a military nature. In fact, about the only military part of the annual Military Ball, one of spring quarter's big all-college dances, was crossed sabers for Queen Pat Warrington.

Science Women's Club

"Taste it, needs more salt. Hurry!" Then a voice from the kitchen, "Here comes the first group!" And so began the Science Women's Club's annual spaghetti supper, cooked by the girls themselves. Other social features of the year included a Christmas party and a Spring Valentine's Party.

This year's informal bi-weekly meetings reached into many fields to present programs about every phase of science from glass blowing to Arctic flowers.

This year a new group of residence representatives was added to the usual cabinet to aid in publicity and membership drives. They also brought in new ideas for programs and projects. Another new activity of the group this year was the campus sale of Homecoming and Veishea events pictures.

SIE

"Hey buddy! Ya wanna throw a egg right in da guy's kisser?" It's easy to see that psychological escape was the theme for the SIE booth at the Engineers' Carnival.

Regular meetings, however, turned to more practical topics, with guest speakers talking on everything from production safety to Iowa labor union activities.

Joint Social Council

What's that they're talking about? Exchanges, house dances. Social butterflies, you say? Not necessarily. Just Joint Social Council meeting, doing their bit towards bettering social activities on campus.

Leading the council were: Edward Kellenberger, president; William Olson, vice-president; Nancy Zulauf, secretary; and Joe Determann, treasurer.

ATO's, winners of the 1950 Sinfonia, seem to be catching the pitch on their final number.

Social Affairs

Light technicians, open house workers, vodvil performers, the central committee — they were all there. Larry Barret's music was soft and low, just the right atmosphere for the Veishea workers' dance.

Veishea itself was a week gone by, but for the students who were given complimentary workers' tickets it meant "thanks" for a job well done.

There was no case of laziness when the Sinfonia traveling trophy didn't travel this year. Succeeding themselves as winners meant down-right serious workouts for the Alpha Tau Omega men's chorus. Under Tom Fisher's leadership, "Shenandoah" and "Sourwood Mountain" rated first with the judges.

The ivory piano keys flashed as Frankie Carle and his orchestra played for the semi-formal Panhellenic-Interfraternity Ball.

Greeks went the "sky's limits" to present a solar system theme. The backdrop in Great Hall, Memorial Union, twinkled with stars representing each fraternity and sorority. Arranged in comet formation, the stars descended from a ring around Saturn toward the earth.

Those present still have the rhythm of "Sunrise Serenade" and a shiny black dance program to remind them of a spring evening well spent.

Dancers whirl to music by Frankie Carle at the Panhellenic-Interfraternity "stellar" formal.

The seniors donned their formal attire for the last time at ISC as they danced to the "sweet" music of Hal McIntyre at the Senior Prom.

An animated campanile, representing a graduating senior jumping through a large white diploma, decorated the backdrop.

Presented during the intermission were Ruth Sorenson, H. Ec. Sr., and Robert Crom, Ag. Sr., elected by the senior class as the "Senior Girl and Boy Most Likely to Succeed."

Guesses flew thick and fast as those present at the Greek Sneak joined in charades. The 1950 Pledge picnic and dance, imprisoned by stormy May skies, was held in Great Hall, Memorial Union.

Comedians from Laughopolis and a "Truth or Consequences" twosome, treated to pie for dessert, livened the after-lunch interval.

Dick Lewis' music started the rhythmic shuffle of feet. At intermission, Ardith Meyer and Wayne Brown were introduced as the "Ideal Pledges." They were given trophies by Dave Williams, dance chairman.

Self-portraits, created by each of the pledge classes, decorated the side walls. A wine backdrop with white columns and Greek figures completed the decorations.

Barbershop atmosphere did not require even "two bits" at the Union the evening of March 31. Spats, handlebar mustaches, and plenty of harmony were props for the Barbershop Quartet Contest sponsored by the Social Bureau.

"Three Mugs and a Brush" won top placing for FarmHouse. Radio station WHO featured the winners on their Corn Belt Farm Hour. Keys were given to the men in the top three quartettes.

The campanile gives an approving look as the seniors enjoy their last college dance.

An ideal situation for Dave as he introduces Ardith, a trophy winner for the Ideal Pledge.

LOUIS MENZE, director of athletics.

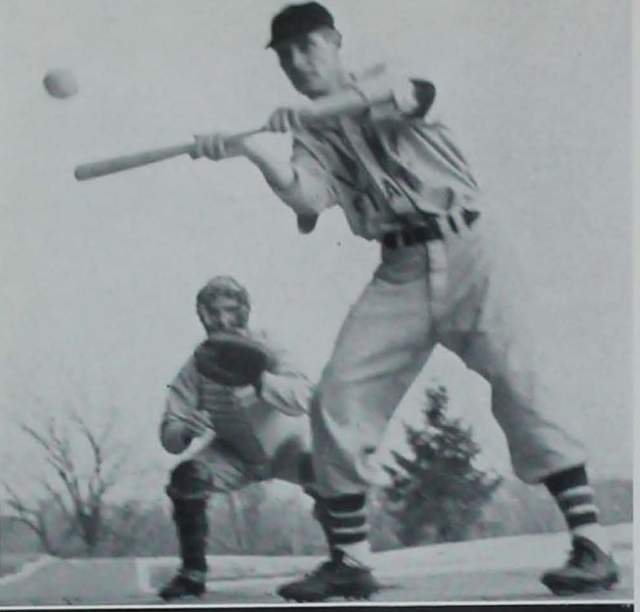

Louie Menze, in his third year as athletic director, was responsible for a high level of conference competition by Cyclone teams. Although no Cardinal and Gold team won a conference championship, the Cyclones were often close contenders. Student interest was high in the action-packed contests.

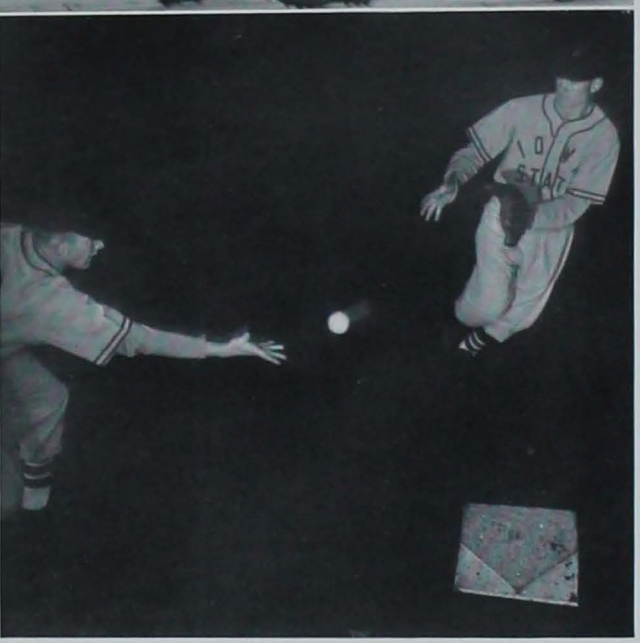

Cyclone teams were sparked by such individual stars as Weeks, Brown, Doran, Wilhelmi, and many others. Many individual and team records were established during the past season of athletic competition. Jim Doran, pass-catching Cyclone end, etched his name in history when he was placed on the INS All-American football team.

Swimming coach Jack McGuire, after fighting his way back from ill health, produced one of the better swimming teams in recent years at this school. Cyclone football and basketball teams faded after holding early conference leads but still provided the thrills and action which Cyclone fans enjoyed.

Pictured in the athletic administration office are Irvin Christiansen, Litta Harris, Louis Menze, Harry Burrell and Merl Ross.

Baseball

Baseball practice in the gymnasium sounds rather absurd, but that is what happens here at Iowa State, the campus of unpredictable women and weather. Cap Timm's varsity ball club found early games hampered by erratic fielding and inconsistent hitting. Hard work at practices however soon brought the team out of their early slump.

Captain Bob Henly sparked at shortstop while on the mound Sterling Singly and Don Burgess hurled flawless ball. Incidentally, Burgess set a school record of 14 strikeouts in one game against Colorado. Poor hitting proved to be a drawback for the home team until the middle of the season when Ken Johnson led his teammates on a hitting barrage which gained intensity near the end of the season with Iowa State winning six of her last seven games.

Although Iowa State finished like a house afire, the team finished sixth in Big Seven competition.

With the coming of spring the baseball season goes into full swing on Cyclones' home field.

Track

The spring track season saw the end of one of the most brilliant coaching careers at Iowa State in quite some years. Coach George Bretnall terminated his coaching career after producing five Big Seven track champions. The 1944, '45, '46 teams won indoor titles while the 1944, '45 cindermen stole the outdoor crown.

Highlighting a rather dull season were Gene Shaver, Mac Verner, John Dickinson and the mile relay team.

For the first dual meet of the season our team managed to slip by a strong Drake team with a margin of eight points. A week later a record-breaking festival was witnessed when Kansas State came to town. Eight meet records had fallen when the meet ended. For the underdog Cyclones, Gerry Broshar tied the 880 meet record. Gene Shaver beat his old 2-mile record by 9½ seconds.

Outstanding in freshman competition was Jim Robertson who set records with the discus and the shotput.

Stepping in to fill the shoes of Coach Bretnell is coach Burl Berry. No newcomer to Iowa State or Iowa high school and college activities, Burl feels that the Cyclones have a chance of being "more than just fair" in the 1951 track season.

Golf

Captained by Don Webb and ably coached by Hugo Otopalik, the Iowa State golf team won half of their seasons meets.

The golfers teed off against Drake for the season opener and won in great style, 14 to 4.

During the season Jim Aikman, Don Webb and Ralph Robinett consistently turned in low scores to accumulate valuable points against opponents.

The state invitational meet in Ames was the setting for Iowa State's total triumph over a throng of Iowa college teams. Our team finished first with a margin of 17 strokes under the runner up, St. Ambrose. Jim Aikman was State's guiding light with a sizzling 76.

Tennis

Due to foul weather, pre-season tennis warmups were held to a minimum, so when seasonal competition began the netters found themselves plagued with poor volleys and inaccurate placements. As the season progressed Harry Schmidt's boys displayed a fine brand of tennis, but they lacked the vital finesse that wins games.

A constant threat at singles and a deadly combination at doubles were Terry Smith and Bill Hukill. Usually they brought the best we had to offer against a field of strong opponents.

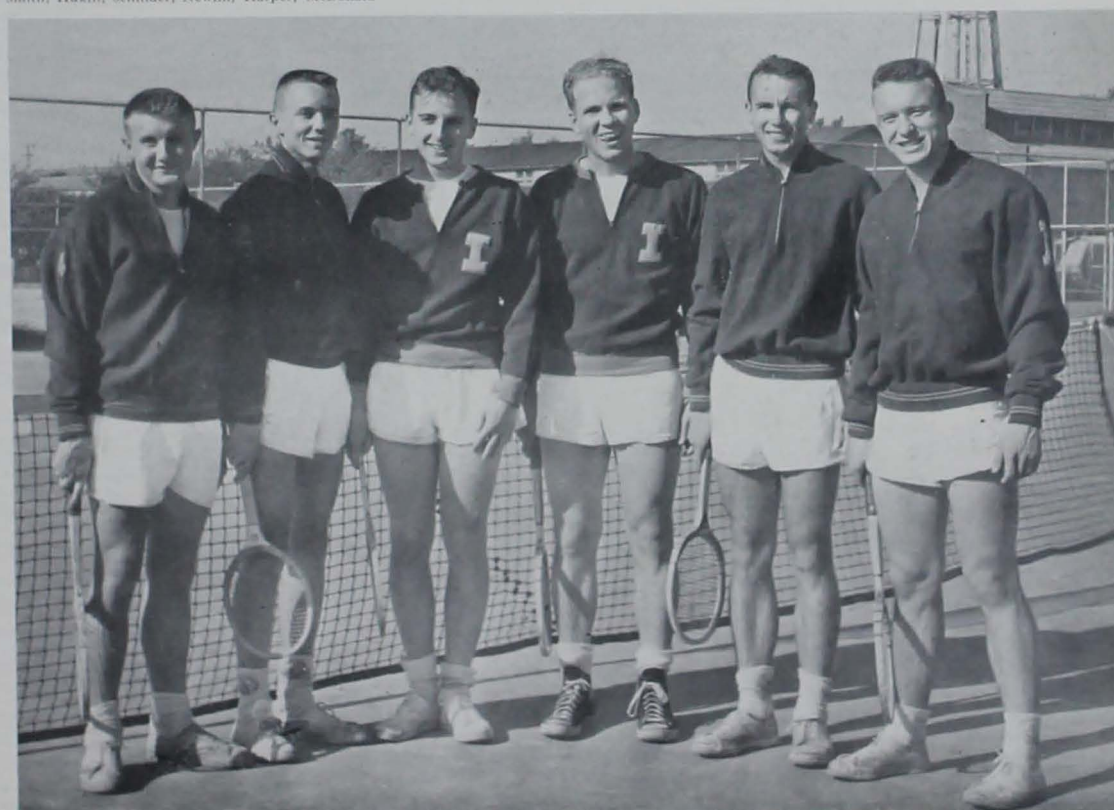

Due to tough preliminary drawings at the Big Seven tournament, the netmen had to be content with the bottom rung of the ladder.

Varsity I

A kiss for the winner. Yes — vivacious Ardith Meyer, the Varsity "I" Queen of 1951 received a kiss and a half from Roger Watts, that lucky president of Varsity I. Miss Meyer, who was selected to represent Iowa State College at the Drake Relays, was also rewarded with a large cardinal and gold trimmed blanket. The announcement of the queen was the climaxing event of an evening of fun at the Varsity I Carnival. All around the floor of the State Gymnasium, concession stands and games of skill were going full blast. Prizes galore, ranging from a penny balloon to an expensive radio were offered to the people who demonstrated above average adeptness in the games of skill. Music

The Varsity I Club claims the distinction of being the most exclusive club on campus. Members are composed of men who have won at least one varsity I letter. Meeting monthly the club discusses and acts on many matters pertaining to sports. Reports from the representatives to 630 club are heard. Basketball and football schedules are also discussed. The club also plans and sponsors the Varsity I Carnival, and the Varsity-Alumni game in the spring.

Near the end of fall quarter the country club was the scene of the annual Varsity I dance. Faculty guests, the coaching staff, members and dates all showed up to have the time of their lives dancing to the music of the Ambassadors.

Women's I Fraternity

Those shapely legs seen in the garter throwing booth at the "I" Carnival last spring belonged to none other than "I" Fraternity members, who enter into many campus activities each year. The honorary fraternity is composed of women chosen for their interest in athletics, their participation in intramural and W.A.A. activities, and their gradepoint. This year "I" Fraternity members worked with the Horticulture Club and sold mums at Homecoming time. They also ushered at Dance Club's Barjche, and at the Naiads Club water ballet. They sponsored swimming parties on Friday nights during spring quarter.

Women's Intramurals

The crack of softball against bat, the ping of tennis balls, and the swish of golf balls were some of the sounds heard around the women's physical education building last spring. A busy intramurals program consisted of softball, swimming, tennis, and golf tourneys.

Each residence house entered many hopeful contestants and competition was keen as the final games approached. Roberts Hall emerged the victor in the swimming tournament, Kappa Alpha Theta took the golf honors, and Delta Delta Delta won the doubles tennis tourney. Pi Beta Phi, winning the singles, captured the tennis trophy.

Following the championship softball game in which Pi Beta Phi defeated Welch Hall, a picnic was given for all intramural participants. "I" Awards were given to women earning six credits in intramurals and WAA activities. The intramurals tournament trophy was awarded to Pi Beta Phi, who obtained the highest number of participation and skill points.

Men's Intramurals

Varsity sports are not the only athletic activities in the spotlight at Iowa State. Throughout the school year the men's intramural program offers men of the dormitories, wards and fraternities an opportunity to exercise little-used muscles and join in the fun of competitive sports. The interest and keen competition shown in the program indicate that it is one of the favorite men's activities on campus.

Sports offered include touch football, volleyball, basketball, bowling, table tennis, track, swimming, softball, golf, wrestling, tennis, and horseshoes. Individuals or teams take part within their own organization — ward, dormitory, or fraternity, and are classified and matched according to abilities. In the major sports (football, volleyball, basketball, and softball) the winners in each organization are pitted against each other to decide an all-college champion.

The intramural program is directed by an Intramural Council from each organization in cooperation with Harry Schmidt of the Physical Education Department. Presidents of the councils the past year were Merle Nieman, Ward System; Dennis Thornberg, MRA; and Mac Verner, Fraternity.

Intramural softballer lets go with a powerful swat at ball.

He swings — he hits — it's a homer. Although this happens sometimes during the intramural softball competition it is more the exception than the rule. Nevertheless many an outfielder is sent scurrying after fly-balls and hot grounders with the crack of the bat, while catchers develop callused palms as a result of fireball pitching

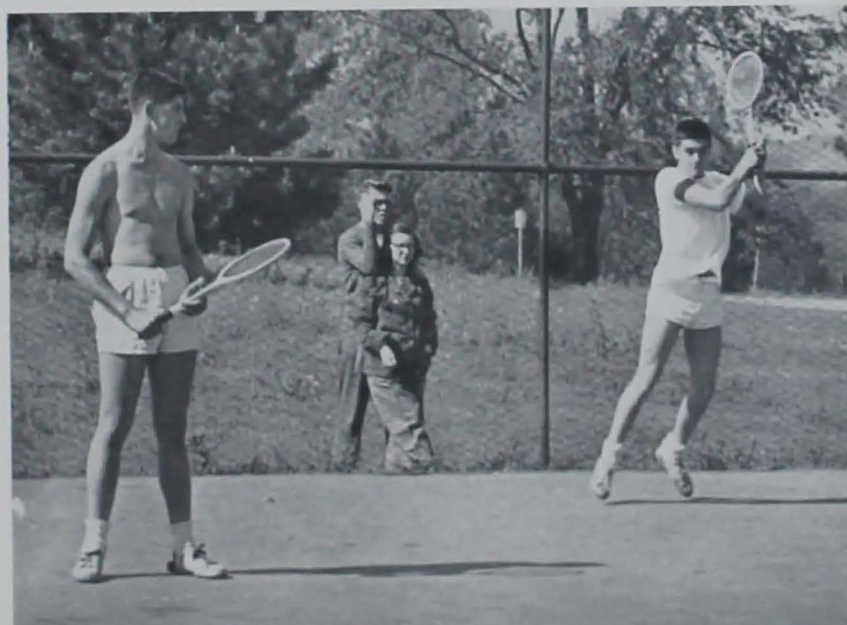

Some teams that entered competition didn't last too long and others were able to weather the storm but everyone that participated had fun regardless of whether they won or lost.

Volleyball participants are ever-ready to spike the ball.

Probably the sport that depends most on teamwork is volleyball, in which competition is staged in the fall and the spring. Classified as a major sport in the intramural program, the spirit of competition is often quite high. Generally the team that had the consistently good lay-ups on the net and spiking was the team that won.

During the spring competition of 1950 Phi Kappa Psi copped the fraternity class honors. Pearson and the Delta Devastators were dorm and ward champions respectively.

The spectators look more worried than the confident Alpha Tau Omega tennis intramural champs.

With the coming of warm weather and balmy skies the shivering student of a few months before anticipated wading into the spring intramural program. Immediately when school began, volleyball was offered. Tennis rackets were dusted off when the competition moved to the courts, and the long-awaiting softball player began playing catch with his buddy when prospects of softball competition grew nigh. To end the successful intramural program for the year the fleet-footed members of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Hughes and Delta track teams won championships on the cinder track.

Over at the Union bowling alley the pins flew as the fraternity, ward and dorm competition moved into full swing while the gymnasium was the scene of a large scale swimming classification and elimination. Down on the indoor oval the best trackmen who could be mustered by the various organizations on campus displayed their talents.

Of all the teams that tried out for basketball some near-professional teams emerged from the elimination to give anxious spectators a thrill a minute. Grunts and groans could be heard and red faces could be seen as the wrestlers competed over at the Armory while ping-pong took place in the various houses on campus.

New Buildings

Iowa State's building program was operating in the eight-figure bracket, not only in the 12 million dollar total cost but also in the amounts of construction materials.

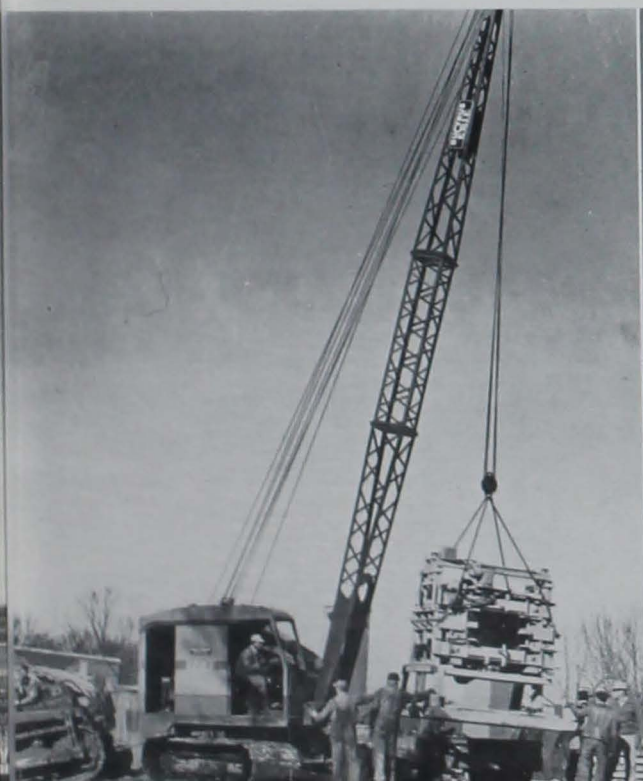

Over a million and a half bricks, or a line stretching six times between Ames and Des Moines, would equal the carloads of this material used for the Agronomy, Friley Hall addition, Electrical Engineering, Chemistry-Physics Link and the Power Plant projects.

For the greenhouses near Botany and Agronomy Buildings, 23,400 square feet of glass — over one-half an acre — was needed. Workmen poured approximately 70,000 sacks of cement into the foundations and structures of all the buildings. Sixty-one miles of electric wire and about 13 miles of water, gas, waste and heating piping were installed. Work was started on the new sections of the Memorial Union that should be ready by 1952.

Almost a college landmark are these smoking chimneys.

Administration

With his sixteenth year at Iowa State, President Charles E. Friley typifies college progress — looking ahead.

Many Iowa State students think of their college administrators as "some men over in Beardshear." But actually these officials are much closer to students than that. Each person is represented when President Charles E. Friley calls his Administrative Board to a meeting in Room 114, Beardshear.

Deans from each division, directors of extension and research, the registrar, business manager, and directors of student health, library and physical plant attend these meetings. What is decided here affects every student — the 12-million-dollar budget on which the school operates each year, graduation approvals, scholarship and personnel problems.

Examination schedules, building programs like the one going on right now are all governed by these administrators. WOI-TV proudly celebrated its first birthday this year. The station is the only educational TV station operating in the United States. This "first" for Iowa State is due largely to the foresight of President Friley, who requested a license before the war when TV was being perfected. The station here is also the first in central Iowa.

Next fall will see the completion of the Friley Hall addition and the Agronomy Building. Farther in the future are plans for new home management houses for senior home economics women.

Working in part-time jobs with class schedules is part of the work of the college student employment service.

Registering seven to eight thousand students and keeping them happy each quarter and summer session is job enough for the many employees in Beardshear Hall offices. But in addition, women in the Information Office tabulate house and dormitory grade summaries, issue eligibility slips for activities and initiation of pledges and even keep track of lost and found articles — only a few of their activities.

Compiling the 250-page "herd book," or campus telephone book, keeps typists busy for half of fall and winter quarters. OK slips for graduating seniors must also go through Beardshear offices, not to mention graduation service programs, college catalogues, drop and substitution slips.

But the Iowa State College staff does not only do paper work. The employment and testing bureaus, located in Building H back of Beardshear, help students find jobs here in school and after graduation.

A constant line of students keeps "Information" hurrying.

"Hut, hoop, hreep, hor — hut, hoop, hreep, hor — column left, harch — to the rip, harch!" These are familiar sounds around the intramural fields on Saturday mornings as NROTC midshipmen conduct their weekly drill.

But there's much more behind the work of these embryo sailors. The Korean War outbreak this year emphasized the acute need for harder efforts in the five hours of drill, classroom and laboratory work each week. Naval Science studies could mean life or death in the future — the midshipmen realized it.

This grim aspect of training did not dim the middies' appreciation of their collegiate life, though. The Drill Team, Spindrift, the unit newspaper, a rifle team and the Veishea

ROTC

When the school year began last fall, instructors were amazed at the great influx of students who began haunting the Armory.

Veterans, reservists and regular ROTC sophomores filed into the offices with the same plea, "I wanna deferment." Not only did the Iowa State Military Department find themselves in trouble, but many junior members of the ROTC class looked drudgingly ahead to the six weeks of summer camp they would spend living in tents because of overcrowded facilities at the camp.

In spring quarter, all ROTC students got their first taste of a new innovation in drilling. Through special arrangement of classes the complete Army and Air Force regiments drilled regularly two days a week.

Besides the re-scheduling of all its classes, the ROTC unit kept up its regular schedule of activities. The drum and bugle corps, Society of American Military Engineers and the Military Amateur Radio Club all drew members from the ROTC ranks. In addition to regular activities the Military Department also participated in Veishea Open House.

With graduation came the coveted bars of a second lieutenant for all the seniors. They then became members of the Reserve Officers Corps.

Social Affairs

All was not studying for the "hot weather scholars."

Starting social events during both summer sessions were all-college mixers held in Lyon Hollow and Memorial Union. Students met at the hollow and later participated in square dancing and social dancing at the Union.

Feature of the first mixer was the breaking of Spanish Pinatas, large containers filled with candy, nuts and favors. Several blindfolded guests were allowed to punch at the Pinatas, thus breaking them Spanish fashion.

The Promenaders, square dance group, were in charge of the all-college folk dance held July 7 on the men's tennis courts.

Crowds sat on the grass to enjoy Friday night band concerts in front of the campanile.

Summer square dance parties sponsored by the Promenaders provide both good exercise and entertainment.

Even sunlight can be romantic when you're dancing on the terrace.

Summer Sports

Sporting events play more of a part in the students' summer recreation than you might think. Aside from the greatest sport of all, trying to beat the heat, many extracurricular sporting activities take place.

George Bretnall was in charge of the summer session softball league. The Sig Eps and the Chamberlain house emerged as victors after the highly contested playoffs. The Iowa State-Ames tennis club went into action soon after the start of the summer. Professor Erlin Jensen managed the netters who were Iowa State College students and Ames residents.

Late in the summer golf enthusiasts had a treat when the Iowa Masters Tournament, featuring the best in golf in the state of Iowa, was held in Ames. Ames also played host to the fifth annual Junior Golf Tournament. Two hundred of the top junior golfers from 40 states participated in the contest.

Freshman Days

Getting acquainted over some pie at the Freshman Days Mixer.

What a lot of confusion! But let's get acquainted anyway! It looks like we're going to stay.

"Did you have a good time tonight? Well, tell us what it was like. Really rough tests today and talk about lines! Brother, my feet just can't stand this walking another day."

All week long, new students talked over Freshmen Days and joined with upperclassmen in discussing registration.

Each new student took a series of tests. They sat and marked furiously for hours while endless lines of checkers marched up and down the aisles.

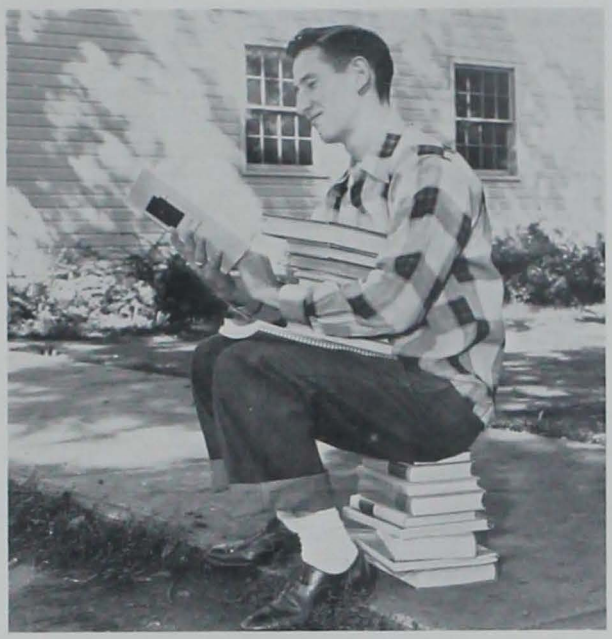

Physical check-ups were accomplished army style with rows of young people parading past the doctors. Tuberculin skin tests and X-rays were part of the routine.

Everyone agreed that the most fun was the picture-taking. They walked in, sat down, the camera clicked and they stood up and walked away. That was all there was to it.

At the opening assembly enthusiasm and loyalty for ISC were built up in the newcomers. Words of Iowa State cheer songs rang through the armory.

Meetings with counselors and group leaders appeared on the schedules. Health assemblies sought to inform the freshmen about the importance of a top physical condition and told them to get plenty of sleep!

The big night finally arrived — the night of the Freshman Mixer, where freshmen meet freshmen — and upperclassmen. During the evening of push-and-shove the Freshman Queen and her attendants were presented. Her majesty was Miss Betty Wittlake. The attendants were Barbara Nore and Carolyn Russell.

Beside Betty Wittlake, Freshman Queen, are her aids, Barb Nore and Carolyn Russell.

Homecoming

Out Friday p.m. and Monday too — MAYBE — Says Dean Helser

Four thousand screaming students moved on Dean M. D. Helser's home with a mass demonstration of school spirit to start off a peppy day and a half of Homecoming.

The cheering army chanted a "Beat K.U." as a prelude to their goal of "No School Friday." The mob choir kept up a high-pitched fortissimo as if they had rehearsed their parts for weeks in advance.

Their efforts were not in vain, for a later announcement granted permission for a Friday afternoon holiday. A promise of all day Monday was pending on the outcome of the Cyclone-K.U. game.

The Pep Barbecue officially started the 1950 Homecoming festivities Friday evening. It took 900 pounds of beef and 4,500 ice cream cups and cheese sandwiches to satisfy the throng of hungry enthusiasts.

An hour long jazz concert by Louis Armstrong and his all-star band began the entertainment for the evening.

Coach Abe Stuber and the senior co-captains were introduced after the concert. The coach commented on the outlook for the game and the probable lineup of the players.

A highlight of the evening's fun was the exciting pajama race competition. "Come on, get going," and "Hurry you guys!" were the spontaneous cries of the women as they cheered for their favorite male sprinters. Checked, plaid, polka dot and striped pajamas flashed past the grandstand. Kappa Kappa Gamma and Oak Hall carried home the winning trophies for the second year in succession.

Rita Dunn's smill was meant for you if you saw her crowned as the Homecoming Queen in the fall of '50.

"Mr. Jazz" Armstrong, "Trumpet King of Swing," reaches far for the low notes at a Veishea dance.

There is a system to scrambling into oversize pajamas—if you're winning in the Pajama Relays.

The spotlight then switched to Homecoming royalty. Rita Dunn, member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, was introduced as the Homecoming Pep Queen for 1950. Her attendants were Betty Skyberg, Oak Hall's nominee, and Ethel Pearce of Freeman Hall. The three finalists were accompanied by Bill Weeks, Jim Doran and John Tillo. Each girl received a bouquet of 14 roses. This year the Kansas University football players had the honor of choosing seven finalists from the eighteen candidates nominated by the womens' residences. An all-college election selected the queen and her court.

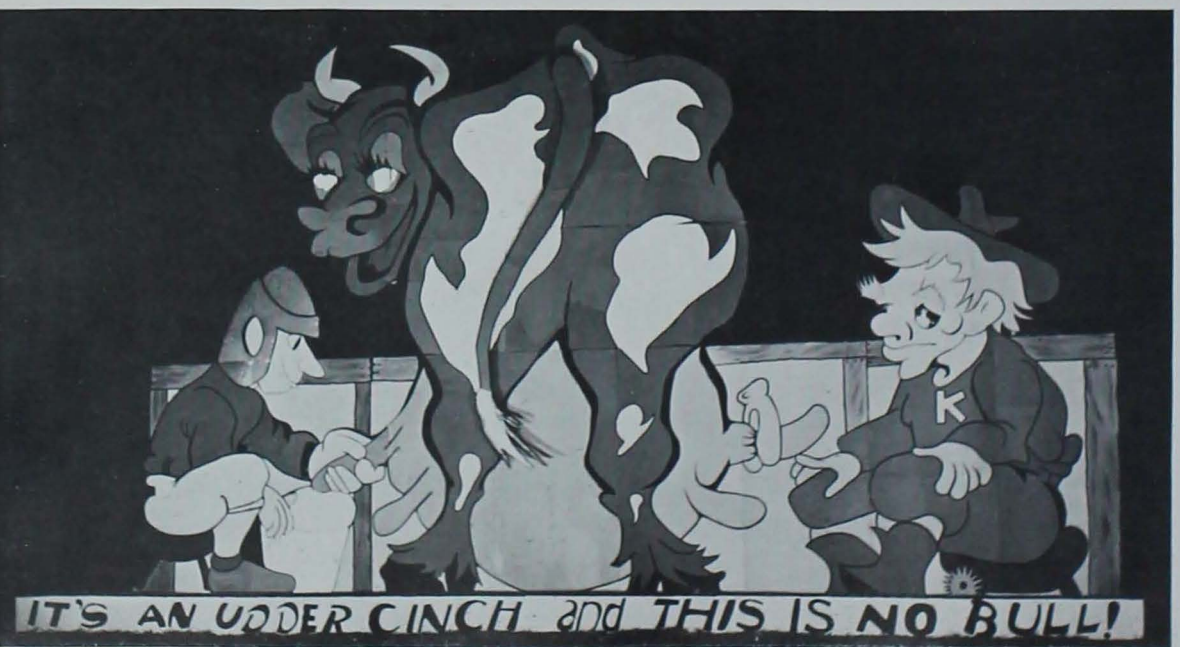

The Iowa State Marching Band displayed Hallowe'en spooks and pumpkins outlined in lights. They joined with the Men's Glee Club in presenting "I Only Have Eyes for You" in the darkened stadium.

After a display of fireworks, the crowd of alums, students and friends followed the band to the traditional bonfire.

Following the Pep Barbecue activities, the first of the two Homecoming dances was held in the combined ballrooms of the Union. Louis Armstrong and his orchestra were featured. At the intermission, Queen Rita and her attendants were again presented. The winners of the residence Homecoming decorations were also revealed. Kappa Kappa Gamma's "KU Is All Washed Up" took first place for the sororities; Beta Theta Pi's "Kan Kansas," for the fraternities; Freeman Hall's "Our Guy'll Sock 'Em," for the women's dormitories; and Alumni Hall's perpetual drinking jayhawk, for the men's residences. Thousands of spectators passed along the judging route during the evening to view the students' creations.

On a summery Saturday afternoon at 2 the Homecoming game began. Many students packed their lunches early in the morning and headed for the stadium to obtain ideal seats.

Powerful K.U. proved a mighty foe for the spirited ISC squad, as the football game got underway. The huge crowd, resplendent in bright shirts and golden mums did their best to spur the team on. However, the Kansas squad, fortified by an early lead, pushed on to victory, 21-13.

Saturday evening a large crowd of alums and students gathered in Great Hall for their last listen to Louis Armstrong. This dance concluded the most festive weekend of fall quarter.

Cyclones trot out onto the field for the last 30 minutes.

Student Government

"All those in favor of —." Guild acts by democratic means.

Looks like Vice-President Austin Colony has the government problems well in hand.

Sliverless bleachers at the fieldhouse . . . a stronger athletic program . . . improved counseling system for freshmen . . . late hour privileges. Does that sound like a winning platform to you?

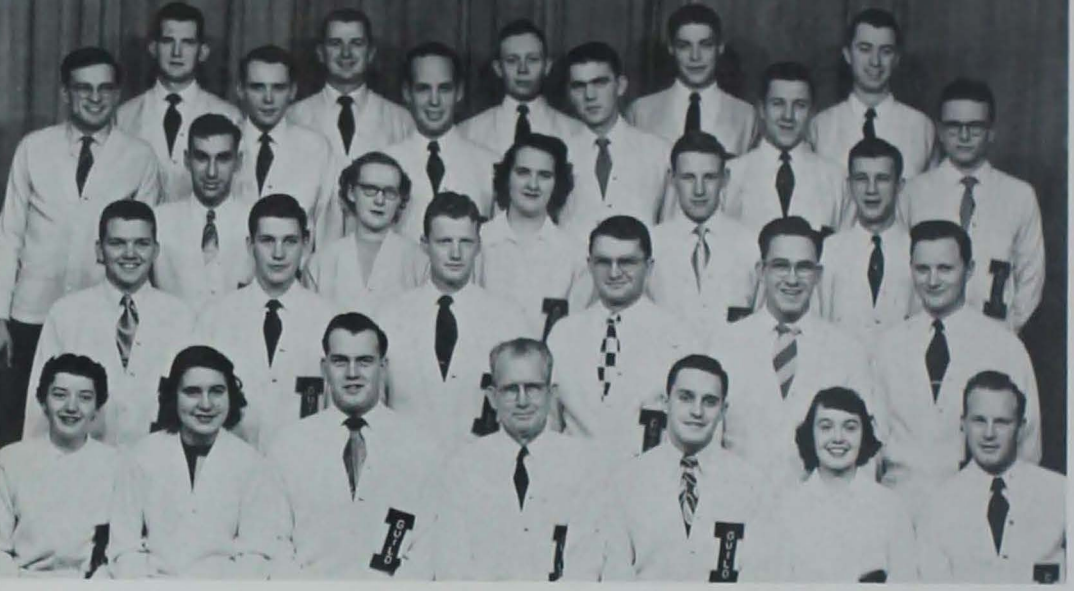

It was April, 1950, and all-college election time at Iowa State. Many were the hours spent in heated discussion — but no open debate, please — over platforms and candidates.

The Student Party's P. S. men, Richard Posekany and James Shive, received strong backing. But a new party on campus, the Collegiate Party with its candidates James Miller and Austin Colony, came through with a decisive majority of votes on election day.

Sharing election headlines with the party issues was the favorable vote on a revision of the constitution of Cardinal Guild.

The Traffic Appeals Board seems as unsympathetic as the bare blackboard to this man appealing a ticket.

Cardinal Guild

A student governing body alert not only to current campus affairs, but also to a changing international situation and its effect on student life — that was the role of Cardinal Guild during 1950-51.

Ames to Berlin — Guild-sponsored "Crusade for Freedom" gave Iowa State students an opportunity to sign the Freedom Scroll, which had as its final destination with a replica of the liberty bell to be placed in a Berlin square.

Firey talk and action resolved into better ways of handling campus traffic problems and the satisfaction of letting the administration know student sentiment concerning athletic affairs. Teacher ratings were assured.

Their gold-lettered bulletin board behind them a Guild committee considers service plaque winners.

"Here it is, down here" Austin Colony explains to the ever-filing Cardinal Guild secretaries.

Increasing student interest in current national and international affairs prompted the formation, during winter quarter, of a four-point program aimed at providing pertinent information for the student body and at giving all students an opportunity to express their views in informal discussions.

Another outlet for Guild energy was its effort to improve inter-group relations and to increase student understanding of campus organizations and their purposes. Information about all the organizations on campus was gathered and compiled in anticipation of the day it can be put into book form and be made available to all students. As a further guide to activity-minded students, Guild established a parliamentary procedure class.

Cardinal Guild officers during the year were: Jim Miller, president; Austin Colony, vice-president; Anne Barnard, secretary; Nancy Voss, assistant secretary; Don Getting, treasurer.

Organizations

Students first, but yet they find time for activities too.

Ag Econ Club

What has economics to do with agriculture? How can you tell a cow and a field of corn about marginal revenue and the long run or short run? This is not what Agriculture Economics is all about, so the members of the Ag Econ Club are doing their best to make their field clear and understandable to all.

Such men as Dr. G. S. Shepherd, who had a great deal to do with setting up Europe's new agriculture policies, are shining examples of agriculture economists. Although the 56 members of the club may never be as famous, they're banded together to more thoroughly enjoy college life. Their Cider Spree, meetings and stags all further friendships and open new topics for discussions about the future development of agriculture all over the world. Another of their activities is a poll of graduates and former students to see what can be gained from learning about actual experience and work in their field.

Ag Education Club

The engineers have their Engineer and the science students have their Scientist, but until the coming of the Ag Ed Newsletter, the group was speechless. Yes, many of the Iowa State graduates in the field throughout the state didn't know that one of their classmates was less than sixty miles away.

Now, however, the situation has changed, the service is rendered and the reunions held through the efforts of Iowa State's student Ag Ed's. One such reunion was the club's annual banquet, held spring quarter. Bill Edwards was president for the year, and C. E. Bundy served as faculty adviser.

A I Chem E

Tours through companies concerned with the manufacture of paint, soap and beer — with free samples of the latter — made the AIChemE's senior inspection trip to Chicago a never-to-be-forgotten part of their education. The group annually sponsors a trip such as this as a part of its program to acquaint members with just what chemical engineering involves, especially after graduation. Bi-monthly meetings, with speakers and movies concerning opportunities in this field, are also held.

At their Veishea open house the Chem E's put on a magic show with a special plastic exhibit. Model toys were made and given away as souvenirs.

This year's officers were: Manfred Siegler, president; Fred Barson, vice-president; Don Harrington, secretary; Herb Rich, treasurer; and Fred Sherk, program chairman.

"Now what happens, Doc, if . . ." The crowd gathers round the speaker questioning him after an AIChemE meeting.

AIEE—IRE

Some wire, a few tubes, the knowledge — presto, a radio.

One of the most popular booths at this year's Engineers' Carnival was claimed by the AIEE-IRE's. The vaudeville acts, complete with imported girls from Drake University plus local talent went over in a big way.

The organization's program during the year included a fall smoker for all "Double-E's," a spring banquet, and monthly meetings consisting of movies; talks — not only by faculty members, but also by students willing to share information about summer jobs; and lectures. Among projects completed during the year was the installing of clocks and other equipment in the new EE building.

ASAE

Warm soles cooling amid straw, a hay ride leaving every half hour — a perfect description of the Grease Monkey's Ball, the annual extra curricular activity of Iowa State's Ag Engineers.

Founded to promote interest in the field of ag engineering and to acquaint the students in this field at Iowa State, the group strived toward this objective this year with their bi-monthly meetings. Also prominent in the society's activities were a winter banquet and a student-faculty picnic late in spring quarter — complete with softball. Presidents for the year were Harold DeBuhr and Bob Tweedy.

ASCE

What's that man with the spyglass and tripod doing? And what's the red and white pole for? These are questions that Harry Blizzard and Prof. Ralph E. Patterson would be glad to answer. They're the president and faculty adviser, respectively, of ASCE and one of their biggest jobs is to acquaint students with the activities and functions of Iowa State College's civil engineers. Now for a little help for Harry and Ralph.

ASCE has a membership of over 200 students and is an active organization with annual picnics and a yearly trip to the regional ASCE convention where Iowa State usually has the largest delegation. The main purpose of ASCE, however, is preparing engineers to fill their proper places in industry after graduation.

Dairy Industry Club

Do you want chocolate or strawberry next? Isn't that your fourth? Oh, well, there's always plenty of ice cream at the DI picnics.

Twice a month the Dairy Industry Club met for movies and lectures. The speakers represented large dairies or manufacturers of dairy equipment. A special treat this year was Professor Mortensen's first-hand account of dairying in Denmark.

Other activities included a dance winter quarter, Veishea open house and a banquet for those attending the DI short course between winter and spring quarters

Block and Bridle

Where would be a more appropriate place for a barbecue than the meat lab? Plenty of meat, a few old text books for a fire — should make a gay occasion! Thus, the 175 members of Block and Bridle held an oversized weiner roast last October. Members of the Animal and Dairy Husbandry faculties, their wives and little ones also shared in the annual cremation.

"The old grey mare" is getting pretty popular in more ways than one here at Iowa State. Over 12,000 spectators watched while mares and fillies alike showed off their sleek lines and perfection grooming at the Veishea Horse Show last spring. In all, 230 entries were presented during this Block and Bridle sponsored event.

the words on the lips of even the less agriculturally minded students last fall as they went to view the "Little International" at the stock judging pavilion. Peggy Nolan, a queen for a day, won the second annual milking contest (for women) but the animals reigned supreme as they were groomed for the big show by members of Block and Bridle. From some 180 entries, winners were chosen for superior breeding and showing technique.

At the group's annual banquet in February, the members heard a speech by Rex Conn, farm editor for both the Cedar Rapids Gazette and Station KCRG. Also, a spring picnic held in Brookside Park included horseplay and the presentation of awards to the winners of the spring freshmen and sophomore judging contests.

Serving in the "giddie up and whooa" department for the club was Don Grieman, while Professor E. A. Klind rode along as faculty adviser.

Block and Bridle's "queenie" for the day, Peggy Nolan, put on the squeeze in the pinches to be milking champ.

Farm Op Club

And as they go around the far turn, it's plow leading tractor! Yes, the Farm Op's really jumped into the social side of the campus this year with their annual Plow Jockey Jump. Blue Jeans and all, the members rocked and glided through an evening of pure and simple socializing.

Founded to promote interest by Farm Op's in meeting their fellow students, the group helped out the treasury by running a refreshment stand during Veishea. Also included in the club's activities were an annual winter quarter banquet and a spring quarter picnic in Brookside Park.

Sharing the president's gavel during the year were Ken Kassel the first half and Dean Fleming the second. Faculty adviser for the group was Prof. Lewis Thompson.

Hort Club

"Nature's little oddities" was only one of the classifications of floriculture, vegetables and pomology (fruit to the average citizen) that were presented at the annual Horticulture Show this fall. Awards were baby orchids — via air mail from Hawaii.

Presented by the Hort Club, this spectacular greenery display is the sole support of the club. It charges no dues, something different at Iowa State. The half a hundred members met bi-monthly to listen to speeches or look at slides, usually of foreign flora.

Free airplane rides — Tailspin. They sound as if they belong together, but in this case the only connection was that both were sponsored by IAeS. The free airplane rides — drawings were held for free tickets — were aimed at luring people to the IAeS open house. Tailspin was the society's social program which this year included informal parties and a spring picnic, which only goes to show that it wasn't all work for Iowa State's members of the Iowa Aeronautical Society.

Members of the society held meetings once a month to meet the faculty, hear speakers and exchange ideas.

During the year, the group was ably guided by its president, Wayne Harmoning. Other officers were Glen Minott, vice-president; and Gaylen Dewey, secretary-treasurer.

Industrial Ed Club

A homer! Wives gazed disappointedly at their husbands — the single men had just beaten the married in the annual Industrial Education Club softball game. But the married men proved to be athletes of sorts, too, on the "Wood Butchers," the club's bowling team.

Every other Thursday the members met in the Pine Room. Here they discussed problems pertinent to their department and planned their annual projects. One was the production of souvenirs which they made out of plastic, leather, wood, and metal to sell at Veishea; another, a Christmas party for their wives and dates. In the spring the members were busy helping with the annual Iowa Industrial Education Conference held at Iowa State. This group also gave a smoker honoring graduating seniors.

Marching Band

Tote that horn, lift that tuba — get a little music and you'll go to Missouri. Yes, Iowa State's marching musicians hadn't given those "mules" from down south a chance to charge the whole game off as a tie. They had outdone themselves with their show for the Mizzou-Stevens crowds.

The pre-game ceremonies were also part of the Marching Band's activities. Boxed around the flag, they quickly fanned out into a star and appropriately played the Star Spangled Banner. But the 120 male tooters came into their own during halftimes with intricate formations which on occasions were "floated" the length of the field. The group also provided dinner music for the pep barbecue and generated pep for the rallies.

Yes, even Iowa State's famed Marching Band had to have its rogue's gallery shot, and on the usual steps of Beardshear, too.

Radio Workshop

Lock studio doors! Quiet please! All right, you're ON THE AIR!

The tense feelings and pre-performance chills quickly vanish as the above directions ring-out through the nervous quietness as Radio Workshop goes on the air with another adult mid-evening dramatic program.

Dramatic acting is just one of the opportunities available as Radio Workshop offers a program in radio and television that is beyond the curriculums of most colleges. In this modern world where mass communication plays such an important role, today's educators say that it is the college students' duty to learn more about the fascinating mediae of radio and TV.

In previous years only radio was available to Radio Workshoppers, but the 1950–51 school year introduced the newest in mass communication, television. Possibly, when studios and equipment permit, Radio Workshop in cooperation with Theatre Workshop may be able to air live television drama featuring Iowa State students.

YMCA

Clear skies and 130 active freshmen made for a successful Freshman "Y" camp and a good beginning for the coming year. Back on campus, the Freshmen were soon busy with the YMCA-YWCA all-college mixer.

Blue skies and yellow foliage formed a proper setting for "Woodcutters." The sound of ringing axes and falling trees assured plenty of wood for Lynn Fuhrer firesides.

An active grade school "Y" program and deputations program gave YMCA men an opportunity for community service. YMCA quartets entertained throughout the state, as well as for Iowa State audiences.

The officers were Charles Hopper, president; Leon Kline, vice-president; David Springer, secretary; and John Tiffany, finance director.

YWCA

Tired faces, crushed suits! Are those women really Iowa State coeds? They looked tired and travel-weary when their chartered bus reached the Miami University campus. But the Iowa State delegation to the YMCA-YWCA National Assembly was ready to help determine the goals and policies of the Y for the next four years.

Reports of the assembly delegates and an explanation of the commission plan for revision of the YWCA on the Iowa State campus were made during a winter all-Y convocation.

The new plan was then started to consolidate and increase interest in the varied YWCA activities.

These and other YWCA activities during the year were led by Esther Breckenridge, president; Ruth Van Roekel, vice-president; Jean Knight, secretary; and Gretchen Hall, treasurer.

Social Affairs

It's casual this year with jeans and country cottons.

Busy, brightly-colored elves watched from the backdrop as dancing couples celebrated the Harvest Ball. Coeds appeared in bright cotton dresses. Their dates, who looked "purty fancy" with red kerchiefs around their necks, wore shirts and blue jeans. The informally-attired twosomes glided between the combined ballrooms of the Union to the tempo set by Lyle Kerns and his orchestra. Lois Downing was queen of the evening. She was Glistening moonlight . . . . glittering decorations . . . . captivating music provided atmosphere at the "Moonlight Whirl." The Home Economics Ball, featuring Elliot Lawrence's orchestra, was held in the Memorial Union. During intermission, Lois Smith, president of the Home Economics Club, was presented with the gavel. Chairman of the ball, Bette Augustine, was given a dozen roses. Following this, candidates for "Most Romantic Engineer" were introduced.

Iowa State students saw double on the night of December 1 at the annual Junior Prom formal. Not just one, but two orchestras were on hand to furnish continuous music during the evening of dancing and fun. The Iowa State Skyliners and the University of Iowa's Larry Barrett forgot their rivalry to contribute their talents for the "Duo Premier" of 1950. The striking backdrop of free form art added to the duo theme. Two abstract forms of white and fuchsia appeared on a black background with a revolving color wheel to dramatize the effect. The highlight of the evening was the presentation of Junior Prom Girl, Janet Supernois, and Big Junior on Campus, Melvin Meling. This couple was elected from a group of eight candidates by all juniors on campus. Mary Ann Lister was chairman for the annual affair.

This couple seems to be the center of attraction.

Miss Skinner. In presenting her selections, she depicted different characters by graceful body movements or the use of her hands. There was no end to her use of accents and tone qualities to give different character parts. A table and two chairs were used for the simple stage setting which she changed as the occasion demanded.

Golden voices — golden trophies! The polished presentations of Alpha Gamma Delta and Elm Hall songstresses led to another polishing job — shining traveling trophies for the two women's residence houses placing at the top of the annual Sorority-Dormitory Sing list. Apple green, boat-necked blouses brightened the Alpha Gam's costumes and Elm Hall girls wore similar blouses of red-orange with formal skirts. Proof of their uniformity was the interpretation, intonation and technique expressed in song by each group of girls. Kappa Alpha Theta and Oak Hall were second place winners at the event held Sunday, Dec. 3, 1950, sponsored by Sigma Alpha Iota, national women's music honorary.

Hey there! Watch those tosses. The bean bags are flying.

"Free cigarettes, sir?" cooed a beautiful Iowa State coed. As the delighted ISC "he-man" eagerly thrust out his hand to receive the packages, his determined date steered him towards the dance floor, casting an "icy stare" at the lovely cigarette girl.

Throughout the Union similar scenes were taking place. This was the big evening when the engineers took over the Memorial Union for their annual "Engineer's Carnival."

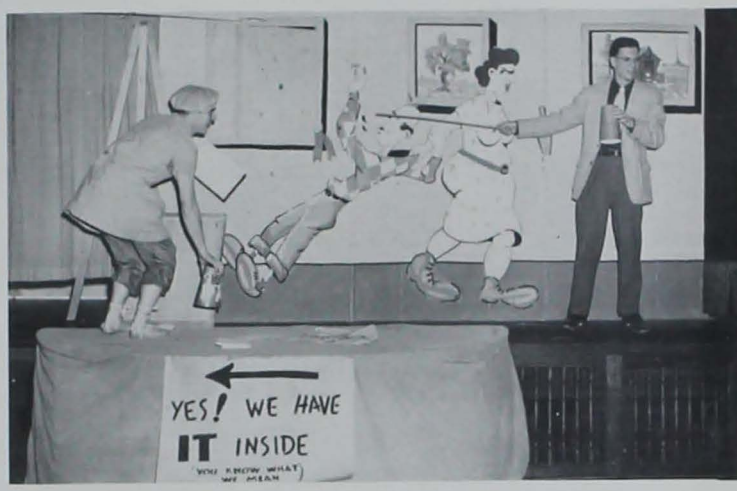

Thousands of students thronged through the halls and rooms of the Union trying their luck at the many booths sponsored by the engineering departmental clubs and honoraries.

The A.I.A. (American Institute of Architects) booth was the judges' choice of the winning idea and most attractive display of talent. This booth offered an Art Gallery where the carnival goers might view the A.I.A.'s idea of engineering in the form of abstract paintings and murals. These paintings were later sold at a noisy public auction.

To the strains of "St. Patrick was an Engineer" the 37 squires of the Guards marched into the ballroom and up to the presentation platform to be formally pledged into the Knights of St. Patrick.

Following the impressive ceremony a drawing was held for door prizes. A wide variety of gifts were given away to the holders of the "lucky" numbers.

In the midst of the merrymaking the Most Romantic Engineer was announced to the expectant students. For the first time in ISC history a girl was chosen to the honored position. Jane Frudden, Arch. E. junior was announced as the students' choice as 1950's Most Romantic Engineer. She was the only girl among the eight candidates for the title. Miss Frudden was presented with a Samsonite traveling bag in honor of her election as M.R.E. of 1950.

People flocked to the Architect's booth to discover "IT." You must know what they mean, or do you?

Oh, it's cold! A patronizer of the Engineer's Carnival booth hits the bullseye and look what's happened!

Football

Since experienced veterans were at a premium during the 1950 football season, many men up from the '49 freshman squad and reserves of previous years saw considerable action. Abe Stuber, head mentor, continued to exploit the razzle-dazzle T.V. formation which was initiated and found so much success here at Iowa State College.

Not long after the season had begun, it became quite apparent that Big Seven competition was going to be rough sailing. Oklahoma remained as the top team in the nation while Nebraska, Kansas, and Kansas U. showed definite signs of improvement over previous years.

The season's record of three wins, one tie, and six losses is not too impressive, but is partially outweighed by the team spirit and determination that was displayed.

Doran snags one to help finish off the Coloradans.

Colorado

ISC – 14, Colorado – 7

In the opening home game of the season the nineteen-point favorite Cyclones had to play from behind and monopolize on a pass interference penalty on Colorado before they could quell the offensive of a surprisingly spirited Buffalo squad. Led by Maury Schnell's running and Bill Weeks' passing, Iowa State racked up two quick touchdowns in the latter part of the game to erase a 7 to 0 third quarter Colorado lead.

Better late than never, the Cyclone football machine began moving in the final quarter with Schnell circling end for the tying tally and soon after Frank Congiardo plunged over for the score that clinched the game.

Northwestern

ISC – 13, Northwestern – 23

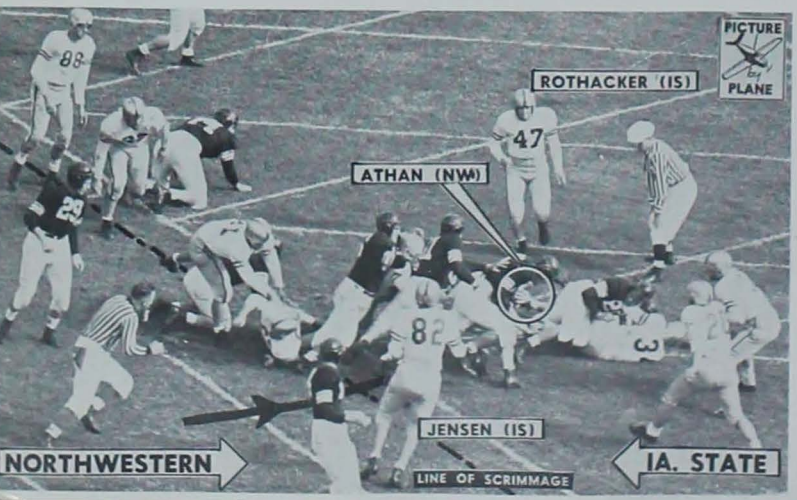

Guard Stan Campbell led the Iowa State Cyclones in a valiant bid for victory against the Northwestern Wildcats, but the Cyclones went down to their first defeat of the season by a score of 23 to 13.

Except for a 5-minute lapse in which the Wildcats scored nine points, Iowa State played on even terms.

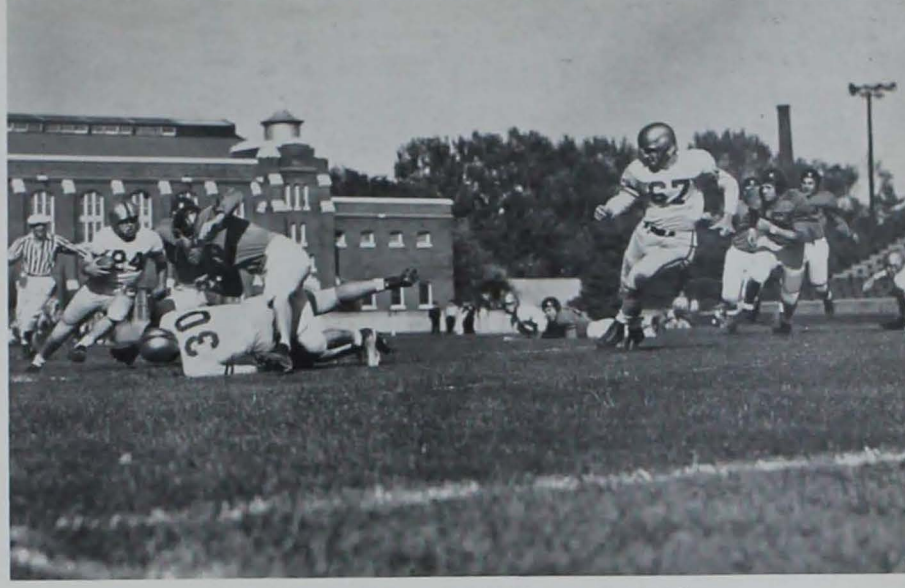

Sophomore back Frank Congiardo led the Cyclone running attack against the Big Ten Wildcats, while Campbell and Bill Byrus were outstanding in defensive play.

Mort Nelson appears a little dismayed.

Athan, of Northwestern, overcomes the Iowa State line to break the 7-7 tie for opponents in the second quarter.

Maury Schnell throws the key block that paves the way for skat back Mel Meling.

ISTC

ISC – 26, ISTC – 8

The Iowa State Teachers College football squad caused no end of concern to the Iowa State team and Cyclone rooters during the first half by forging ahead of our disgruntled team by a margin of two points.

After halftime Bill Weeks unleashed a passing barrage that would have stymied any pass defense in the nation. The Weeks-to-Doran combination figured in two tallies while Bill Weeks plunged for the third score. Green scored ending the game with a comfortable margin of, 26 to 8.

Kansas

ISC – 21, Kansas – 33

The Kansas Jayhawks dampened Iowa State's Homecoming spirit by downing the Cyclones 33 to 21 in a free-scoring game before a record crowd of 19,500. Behind 19 to 0 in the second quarter, the Cyclones got back into the game by virtue of Jerry Cimburek's interception and 47-yard runback of a misplaced Kansas pass. The Cyclones scored again before the half ended, but the Jayhawks came back strong after the intermission and pushed across two touchdowns while holding the Cyclones to one.

Who's going to make the completion, that is the topic up for discussion.

Long Cy Wilhelmi pulls one out of the sky against Mizzou.

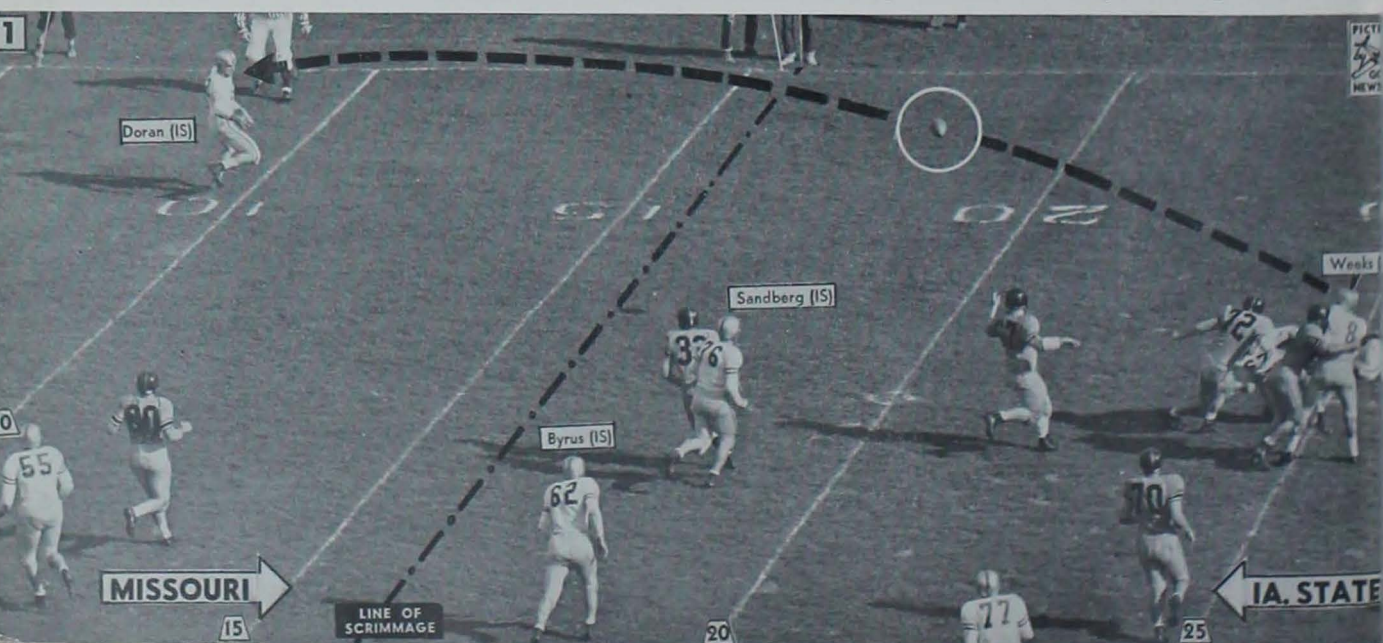

Missouri

ISC — 20, Missouri — 20

The Cyclones gained revenge for the 32 to 0 shutout handed them by the Missouri Tigers in 1949 by tying the powerful Tigers 20 to 20 on their home field this season. The game was a hard fought battle all the way, with each team exhibiting a hard driving offense and a stubborn defense.

Mark Rothacker intercepted a pass early in the game which resulted indirectly in a touchdown. Repeated attempts by Weeks and Doran finally placed the Cyclones in the lead, 6 to 0. Missouri came back with two quick touchdowns to end the first quarter leading 13 to 6. The Cyclones knotted the count on a 44-yard pass play in the second period, but the Tigers bounced back to end the half leading 20 to 13. In the second half Missouri drove to the Cyclone one- and nine-yard lines. The Cyclones not only held fast, but pushed over 7 points in the closing minutes to end the game in a tie.

In flight is one of the three Weeks-to-Doran passes that was completed for a touchdown against the Tigers.

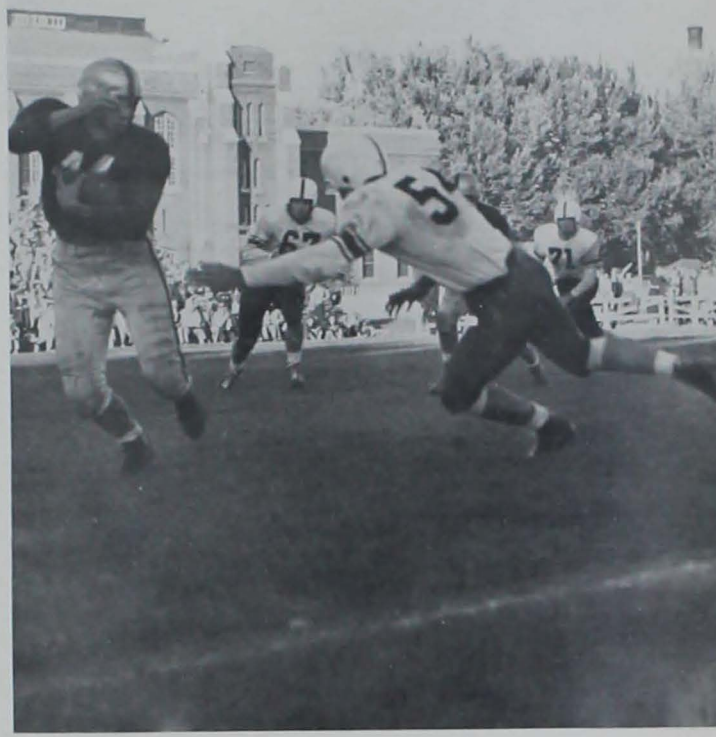

Oklahoma

ISC – 7, Oklahoma – 20

The nation's top ranking football team had a few tail feathers plucked the Saturday it took on the Cyclones at Clyde Williams Field. Yes, the men from Oklahoma won but that is not the whole story behind the game. During the major part of the game the battle was nip and tuck. Scoring on quick jabs the Oklahoma team was able to pile up a 13 to 0 halftime lead. As play commenced after the rest, it became apparent that the Cyclones were not to be denied. For every time the Sooners struck hard, Iowa State retaliated. Both teams, however, scored once.

The game was in the final period before the Weeks-Doran passing combination was able to penetrate the heralded Oklahoma pass defense with a spectacular 30-yard completion which set up the touchdown. The Cyclone defensive unit fought gamely in holding the high-scoring, undefeated Sooners to one of their lowest scores of the season.

Congiardo successfully eludes a lunging Sooner tackler.

An Oklahoman makes a futile attempt to catch Doran as he snags a 30-yard toss from Weeks.

Kansas State

ISC – 13, Kansas State – 7

A pass by Bill Weeks and a late Kansas State fumble were enough to give the Cyclones a pair of fourth quarter touchdowns and a 13 to 7 win.

After completing a 16-yard pass to end Bob Voetberg, Bill Weeks scored the first TD on a short run. Clendening kicked the extra point to tie the game.

Mark Rothacker provided the margin of victory when he recovered a Wildcat fumble and scored on the next play with a bruising end sweep.

After scoring the second touchdown the Cyclone line fought off two desperate scoring attempts by the aroused Wildcats. One drive carried to the one-foot line and the other to the eight-yard line as time ran out.

Halfback Ed Green shows that football can be a rough sport.

Drake

ISC — 21, Drake — 35

The annual classic game with Drake this year was interesting in more ways than one. Not only was each team trying to come out victorious but various individuals on both teams were striving for individual laurels.

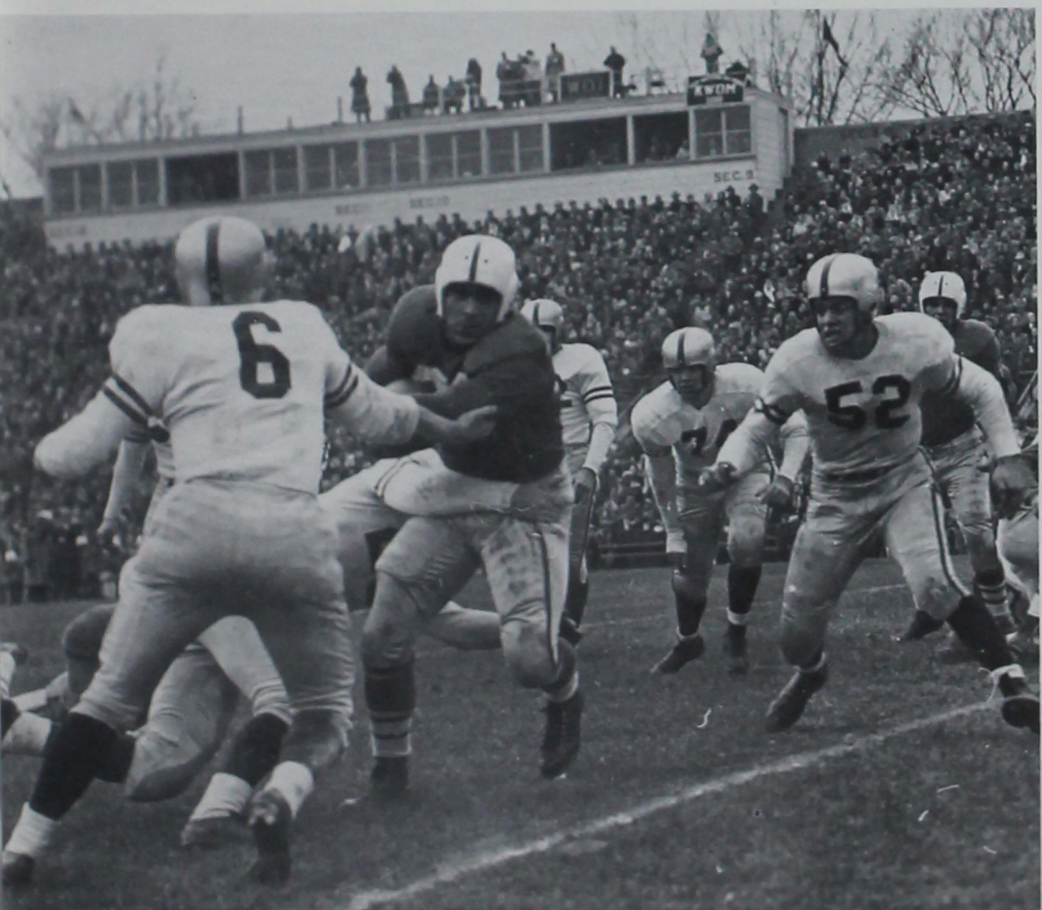

Johnny Bright of Drake netted 229 yards rushing to set a new national offense record while Bieneman also of Drake maintained the position of top pass catcher in the nation. For Iowa State, Bill Weeks broke his old record of completed passes and Jim Doran broke his previous pass catching record.

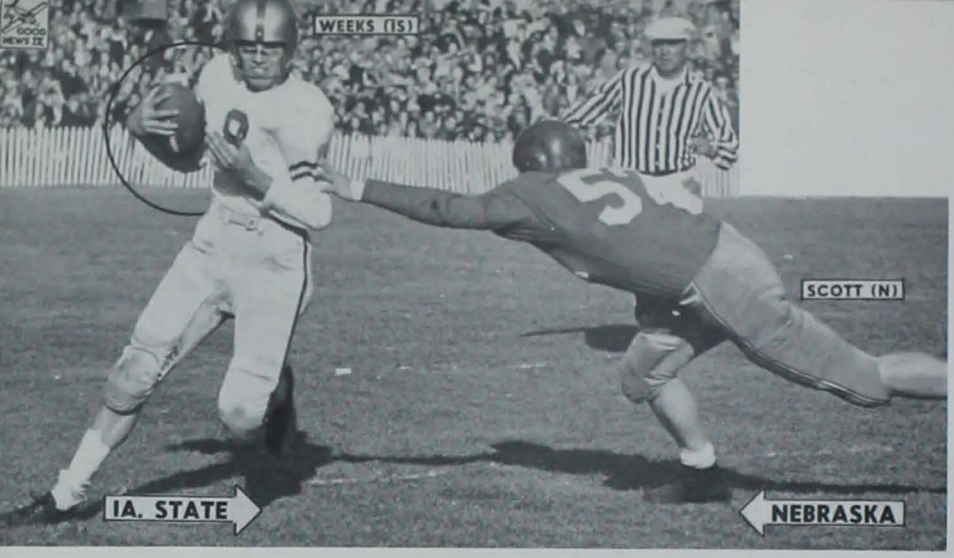

In light of the records set the actual game seems rather secondary. The Cyclones offense and defense sputtered on occasion while the Drake offensive was ever dominant — enough to win with a two-touchdown margin.

Eddie Green (23) appears to be doomed for double trouble.

Johnny Bright, the nation's top ground gainer, runs into trouble as he attempts to buck the Iowa State line.

Bill Weeks seems to have the jump on this would-be Nebraska tackler.

Nebraska

ISC — 13, Nebraska — 20

The much improved Nebraska ground offense led by the All-American Nebraska sophomore, Bobby Reynolds, was held under control by a surprisingly stubborn Iowa State defense.

The game was tight all the way and the outcome was doubtful to predict. A passing attack and a run around right end by Weeks brought the first tally for the Cyclones. It was not until the latter part of the game that Nebraska pulled away from the Cyclones. Nebraska scored on two sustained ground attacks and also cashed in on an Iowa State fumble on the five-yard line.

In the final seconds of the game McGlynn of State narrowed the margin of the victors by taking a hand-off from Weeks and charging over.

Arizona

ISC — 26, Arizona — 27

The final game of the season played at Arizona saw the end of the college careers of sixteen Cyclone gridders. This last game was a tough one to lose for these men, for the free-scoring game was won by the Arizona squad in the last quarter with two quick touchdowns.

Bill Weeks and Maury Schnell were Iowa State's drawing cards on offense. Weeks completed 12 passes for a seasonal total of 116 completions in 220 attempts. By the beginning of the fourth quarter, Weeks ran for two touchdowns to help boost our margin over Arizona 26-14.

Thirteen plays were needed before the Wildcats crossed the goal to collect the six points that spelled defeat for the Iowa State Gridders.

Wrestling

With varsity sports moving inside upon the commencement of cold weather, the sports follower automatically turns his attention to wrestling. Coach Hugo Otopalik, who, incidentally has been wrestling mentor at Iowa State College for the last 28 years, again masterfully molded an exceptionally proficient wrestling team from the majority of underclassmen with whom he had to work.

Captain Bob Wilson, the lanky 137-pounder, lived up to his championship rating by taking seven straight victories. Bob Lewis and Ed Jones, two outstanding sophomores, proved to be the instigators in Cardinal and Gold victories over favored opponents. Some of the top teams in the nation that were encountered, such as Iowa State Teachers and Oklahoma, proved too much for the grapplers. The team's five-and-five record, however, justified a feather for their hats.

Coach Otopalik points out the finer holds of the game.

Pep Council

The Pep Council acts as the nucleus of all pep organizations on campus. Composed of members of Yel-Jax, Cheer Squad, Pep Band, 630 Club, WAA, Varsity I, and Twisters, the council formulates the policy that is used at all sports events. This organization also plans and presides over the many pep rallies and student migrations, and introduces new students to each other at the Freshman Mixer.

Pete Meeks, the capable president, and his fellow workers have done much behind-the-scenes work which keeps pep activities running smoothly. Without this club, pep activities would be curtailed greatly.

Cheer Squad

Presiding at all home games and some on the road, the cheer squad literally knocks itself out to produce spirit and noise from ISC sports fans. Sending off and greeting the football team at the station is another service the squad performs.

Pete Meeks directed the cheer squad through the football season while Jim Hogfeldt led the jumping jacks thru a hectic winter quarter. Meeting weekly this small but loyal organization is forever cooking up some new and novel scheme to obtain spectator participation which is so important to the athletes that wear the cardinal and gold in Iowa State sports events.

Twisters

Blanket parties are just part of a day's activities with the Twisters, women's pep organization, at least during the March of Dimes campaign. Last year at that time the Twisters carried blankets around the basketball floor at the half of a game into which the contributers tossed their money. The title given the event was a "blanket party."

The Twisters attend all sports events en masse to stimulate school spirit and add color. Throughout the year they devote their abilities to different drives and campaigns in addition to their pep activities. The Twisters work in coordination with their brother organization, the Yel-Jax.

Yel-Jax

The 5,000 sandwiches which the Yel-Jax, men's pep organization, helped make, pack and hand out at the 1950 Pep Barbecue was only the beginning of a year for the cardinal and gold-jacketed men whose work is dedicated to service.

They also took tickets at the Louis Armstrong concert. At every game during the football season, the Yel-Jax designed and made ready a color card section displaying caricatures and pictures in coordination with the Marching Band's performance at halftime. During Veishea, the men worked hard at any job given them, from ticket-taking to cleaning up the stadium after SOV.

With a new type of judging being used this year, no one skit was rated in first place. Judges picked two skits from each of the five nights of competition. From the winning ten, trophies were awarded to the top five skits to be again presented in Veishea Vodvil.

The organizations winning the judges' ballot were Kappa Sigma, Phi Delta Theta, Chi Omega, Acacia and Tau Kappa Epsilon.

With an outstanding chorus line, the members of Kappa Sigma gave their new version of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Telling their satire in song, they gave this old-time fairy tale a surprise ending. Snow White decided to marry the seven dwarfs instead of running off with Prince Charming. Not to be outdone, he announced his intentions of marrying Queenie, the villainess.

In their "History of Drums," the Phi Delts depicted the different stages in the development of drums from primitive times until today. With the use of a narrator, the audience was taken to a native dance, an Indian ceremonial war dance, a Spanish bull-fight, and finally to a modern jazz dance done in black face.

A barnyard scene, complete with animals that danced, was used by the Chi Omegas in "Country Style." The central character, Goofus, decided to go to the city to see the sights. After a letter from his city cousins he prepared to leave. But a chorus line of milkmaids and the farm animals kept him home on the farm.

Depicting a satire on operatic singing, the Acacias presented "La Draft Induction." Their draftee, after failing to find any way to beat the draft, sang goodbye to his parents and girl friend.

Lack of feminine company was more than "Mr. Touchdown" could take. He felt ill before the big game in the Tau Kappa Epsilon skit. With the help of spectators, coaches, cheerleaders and the team, the Homecoming Queen brought back his enthusiasm in time for him to win the game.

Union Board

"Snowbound" Iowa State style! Yes, the weather has really had its part in almost all of the activities of the student Memorial Union this year — all the way from influencing the grill's business to the stranded jive specialists of the Union Board-sponsored "Jazz at the Phil."

Out of twenty-nine board members, ten are students representing undergraduates on the Union's board of directors. The voice may be small, but it's been well heeded. Varieties, Union Night Club, bridge classes and tournaments, Sunday night movies and music concerts, these were all Union Board sponsored activities. Board members are also assigned as financial "liason officers" on the central committees of each dance that is held in the Union.

Heading the board this year were discussion-guiding Pete Sandberg, president, and work-horse Bill Buse, vice-president.

Publication Boards

A $50,000 laboratory for ISC journalism students — that's the Iowa State Daily.

It's the job of the Daily Publication Board to select an editor and business manager each year, dictate editorial policies, examine business conditions, and in general control the growth and expansion of the voice of Iowa State College.

The soul of the Bomb may be the editor's, but the policies and production headaches of the yearbook were the board's

An editor and a business manager were appointed and guided, budgets and improvements were approved. Thus, the Bomb Publication Board guided its $34,000 responsibility to press — the Bomb of 1951.

During 1951, the fatality rate of flourescent tubes in those two rooms at the east end of the Press Building has been astoundingly high. Some said these rooms were open only at night, and then there were those who cried "Of course, vacant!" Well, they were probably both a little correct — vacant of experience; and open all night!

There were deadlines; production problems; grade troubles; new personnel — all the technicalities that plague a new staff. At first these were hard to solve, but as things slowly but surely went down the drain to the press shop in the basement, the jigsaws seemed to fit themselves together easier and easier.

Thoughtful Herb Pownall, a photographer supreme, soon found that there was a vast difference between the Daily darkrooms and the editorial desk of the Bomb.

"Where in the Bomb office is that informal picture that these nine guys have dropped in to identify? You know, that one with the four women around the table."

Yes, it's a fact, just such tragic things as these were the plagues of the 1951 Bomb staff. Pictures that had to be taken five and six times before they could be printed and copy missing.

Nori (ya gotta do it) Frank chasing down that lost signature . . . Lois Ohnmeis talking to two photographers through two different doors at once . . . Peggy McLaren seeing two senior pics for one person . . . Mike Hunzeker drawling about his missing index bureau . . . Dotty Beisner's baby feeding troubles . . . Rog Hill's hot copy (a lost "roll yer own") . . . and Pat Pumphrey with her work "engraved" on her mind.

Yes, these were the times that tried the minds of Iowa State's energetic yearbook personnel.

The story behind each Bomb picture is a complicated one — ask any of these photographers, he'll be glad to tell you.

The business staff kept plenty of secretaries at work.

But, just as there was a Dr. Jekyl, there had to be a Mr. Hyde; and hide is just what Business Manager Jack Nelson didn't do.

Mild mannered and pup loving, Jack and his inseparable baby boxer seemed to keep the troubles of the editorial side from affecting his toilers too much. "Smooth" is a term that has been used to denote varied subjects, but as applied to the Bomb, it described only the business staff.

Not only did the trickle of expenses overflow toward the budget of $34,000, but difficulties had to be ironed out for collecting 40 cents every half-hour on the hour from some patient student wanting his Bomb sent home. In fact, it got to be, "Got 40 cents in change? Good! Name and address on the paper — and leave the money on top."

Sales — this was the task of Tom King. Did you know that only 51 per cent of the student body bought Bombs? (The rest got them free!) This was a 15 per cent increase over the old record, not bad at all, for the business books.

"Hey, tear up those last 200 pages and start over. Just found another half page deal to stick in the middle."

Another contract and another shekel — another part of those 350 contracted pages of the '51 Bomb sold. Yes, this was the whirlwind job of tireless Bob Dowell, page contractor. Those many old "customers," the few new ones and the inevitable slow ones were the worries for Bob, but they were in — and signed right on the Bomb's black and red dotted line.

And, lest we not forget, there was also that slender integrating factor in the person of Eleanor Lemmer, office manager, presiding over all the business staff's secretarial and filing systems. The systems — they are the unsung of the staff that will have their names here in sweat and blood about this time next year.

"Bomb—to bombard, drop bombs upon!" Well, that's what Mr. Webster has to say about our yearbook. We hope you like it!

"We fight with typewriters,
"We are the best of fighters . . ."

Thus, singing a sacred press building anthem, members of the Iowa State Daily staff began their entertainment at one of the "thirty" parties which signified the end of each quarter's publication.

But, to the chagrin of the journalists, these parties came but four times a year, and were amply supplemented by hard work for members of the staff.

During the past year, several changes were evident in the Daily. One of these has been a greater freedom in makeup — issues with

Also, the Daily has changed its editorial viewpoint to encompass more than just the day to day happenings on the campus. Last spring saw a two-page spread outlining the history of veterans on campus. During fall and winter quarters, the Daily surveyed such subjects as student attitudes, and racial prejudice on campus.

The story on veterans received first place state recognition with republication in the Des Moines Register, and later, an award from the journalistic fraternity, Sigma Delta Chi, as the best feature story appearing in United States college newspapers during the year. The story was written by Richard Braun, who took over in January as editor, replacing Bill Alford.

In addition to feature material, the Daily has stressed special comprehensive coverage of such events as the International House fire, the death of two men working on the

Iowa State Scientist

The newest of the many Iowa State publications moved slowly off its coltish legs during the past year, to join its financially solvent brothers and sisters in the college journalistic world.

Within these covers, students have received first news of Iowa State research on rare earths, photosynthesis, studies of prison publications, and purification of zirconium metal. Also featured have been comprehensive stories on college television plans, debates on college wage levels and the three to one sex ratio.

No sir, the cover-run isn't the main attraction.

Religious Activities

Religion in Life Week

A week of deep thinking was in store for Iowa State students during the twenty-fifth annual Religion in Life Week, January 8 to 14. The reason behind the thought-provoking discussions was Dr. Joseph Sittler, Jr., guest speaker for the week.

A professor of theology at the Lutheran Theological Seminary in Chicago, Dr. Sittler didn't apologize for his intellectual emphasis in his addresses. He stressed the relationship between God, man and nature as a means of seeing "A Light in the Crisis" of today. He talked common sense to his audience, and students and faculty both responded enthusiastically at the informal discussions and convocations on the week's program.

A marriage panel Saturday afternoon provoked debate between Dr. Sittler and members of the college sociology and psychology departments. Climaxing the week's activities was Dr. Sittler's Sunday morning address, "Our Country and God's Country."

Morning chapel services, radio broadcasts and debater's forums were also scheduled during the week by the central committee headed by Ronald Aronson, general chairman, and Wayne Van Ness, vice-chairman. The Rev. R. E. LeMoine was faculty adviser.

Interfaith Council

Morning chapel devotions built around themes such as "The Time is Now — Acknowledge God," panel discussions and all-college convocations featuring Dr. Joseph Sittler, professor of theology at the Chicago Lutheran Theological Seminary, helped make Interfaith Council-sponsored Religion in Life Week a worthwhile one for the students. This year's observance was the twenty-fifth of its kind held at Iowa State.

Interfaith Council, composed of representatives from 18 member organizations including Catholic, Jewish, and Protestant church groups plus the YMCA, YWCA and Inter-Varsity, also sponsored the World Student Service Fund and International Christian University drives during winter quarter.

A leaders' workshop held for officers and interested members of the church groups during spring quarter was a new and successful project of Interfaith this year. President for the year was Dale Hoover.

Frisbie Fellowship

Swing yo' pardner Western style at Frisbie Fellowship.

With a howl and a splash, one wood-chopper gave way to loose footing and pitched into the cold, October river. This was the unexpected entertainment received by those attending the "Chop and Chow Day" sponsored by Frisbie Fellowship. An evening campfire with story telling ended the day's woodcutting picnic.

Fellowship members made use of two Saturday afternoons during the year for some good hard work. The earnings from the "Christ Work Day" were used for missionary projects. A D.P. student was brought to this country through the fellowship's efforts.

Interest and activity were kept at a high point by the "Frisbie Friday Frolic," the "Fall Carnival" and the Senior Banquet held in spring quarter. Paul Walther presided at Fellowship meetings and was assisted by Jack Schorle, vice-president; Mary Dyball, secretary; and Interfaith delegates Faith Fitch and Luanne Woodruff.

Gamma Delta

A ranch-style house, a smiling snowman — those were only two of the novel boxes for which Gamma Deltans bid at their winter quarter box social. The social was one of the Friday evening parties held by the group this year, and proceeds went to the fund for equipping a student center for Japanese students in Tokyo.

"Freezer Parties" were another favorite with students at the Memorial Lutheran Student center. A freezerful of homemade ice cream was a treat, even when they had to freeze it themselves.

Regular Sunday meetings included movies, topic discussions, guest speakers and social hours. During the year, Robert Kohnnke and Walter Jeske were elected president and secretary of the international organization.

Gamma Delta, a report and the usual audience discussion.

Inter-Varsity

Life in the out of doors — freedom; life under communist rule — suppression; these were the extremes of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship program this year.

"Life under the communist heel," this was the subject of an interesting talk by Doctor Karlys Leyas. Dr. Leyas, a former Latvian, had many interesting first-hand accounts of soviet control in satellite nations.

Other activities of the group included Saturday night discussions, speakers, movies and social hours as well as the Iowa State chapter-sponsored three-day conference at the Lutheran Riverside Camp in Story City. President for the year was Charles Anderson.

Bethany

A non-chilly, chili supper complete with a "home grown talent" show. Yes, this was the fund-raising stunt of the Bethany Fellowship's senior cabinet this year. But, the money didn't stay unused long since it was forth-with sent to the International Christian University in Japan.

The student organization of the Christian Church, the group also spread the joys of education to a displaced Latvian student here on the Iowa State campus. Sponsoring student ministers for the church services in Rinard and Sandyville also took up much of the group's time. Presiding officer for the year was Louis Brown.

Who wouldn't relax in the LSAers' comfortable lounge?

"Isn't it beautiful?" Students and guests attending the dedication of the new Lutheran Student Center agreed that it was. The comfortable, modern interior plus a new television set helped make the center a popular meeting place even for a small group of friends, during their free hours.

Members of LSA didn't let their new center make them forget what was going on in other parts of the world though. One of their projects was the co-sponsoring of one D.P. student and helping bring over another D.P. They also packed forty boxes of clothing to be sent to Germany.

During fall quarter the group was host to the Iowa Regional Convention which was attended by nine other Lutheran Student Associations from all over Iowa.

Officers of the group this year were Willis Schellberg, president; Dorothy Rosen, vice-president; Joan Simons, secretary; and Harold Naig, treasurer.

Newman Club

Newman Club members have had their hands full the past year with their many activities but especially during April 13, 14 and 15 was the Catholic Youth Center buzzing with activity. The students played host to approximately two hundred delegates representing fifty-four colleges at the five state Newman Club Province Convention.

Also on the agenda of the group's spring functions was the annual senior banquet and informal dance.

During the year Sunday morning breakfasts and Sunday evening get-togethers were regular events. Firesides and discussions provided further social fellowship.

Bob Plunkett served as president with the assistance of Joan Fortune, vice-president.

Westminster Foundation

Money from pancake suppers, deputation teams, and odd jobs helped Westminster Foundation members bring Kalju Eik, an Estonian displaced person, to Iowa State.

This project, with weekly Sunday night meetings and Bible study groups, keynoted the Presbyterians' activities. A new student center is under construction for the group.

Roger Williams House

"A Home Away from Home" is the welcome mat for Baptist young people at the Roger Williams House. Busy "completing" the new Baptist Church, the student group has also had time for inter-church youth activities and singing for two Sunday services.

Firesides, treasure hunts, and a "pancake flip" rounded out the schedule of Sunday discussions. Emily Mathews served as president; Lynn Coultas as vice-president.

A little shovel and a lot of ideas make for a typical Roger Williams informal fireside.

Wesley Foundation

"Say, do you know that one about the guy who had to . . ."

It was a big year for the Wesley Foundation members. Not only was their Collegiate Methodist Church written up at length in "The Christian Century" magazine but "Life" magazine early in 1951 acclaimed it as one of the twelve most successful Protestant churches in the United States.

And it's no wonder, for the many activities and worthwhile functions sponsored by the Wesley Foundation have added to the credit of the Methodist Church. Not only at each Sunday evening meeting are topics considered and discussed such as leadership and membership training, religious education, recreation techniques, music, and courtship and marriage, but throughout the year Wesleyans conduct several major activities.

Among the more outstanding projects has been the sponsorship of a foreign displaced student. Further achievements include a local chapter of Wesley Players, national Methodist dramatic fraternity.

Wesley Foundation is comprised of all Methodist preference students at Iowa State.

Conferences were among the Foundation's continuous endeavors. Groups composed of five to fourteen members attended meetings from Lake Poinsett in South Dakota last June to the Christian Citizenship Seminar held in Washington, D.C., and Lake Success, New York, in February.

The Wesleyans provided a full social schedule too with a monthly theme party in addition to numerous firesides and pledge-active dances during winter quarter.

President Jonas Miller, Vice-President Glen Schmidt, and Secretary Marjorie Sickles headed the council of eighteen students which guided the group's activities.

AIA

The architectural engineers took all at the Engineers Carnival this year! The first place booth and the Most Romantic Engineer — the first girl MRE in the history of the contest — were both theirs.

The campus program of the organization included a series of meetings at which outside architects and authorities from related fields spoke.

During winter quarter representatives of the group attended the state convention of the American Institute of Architects and presented a skit — a caricature of Iowa architects — at one of the meetings.

AIA officers during the year were: Richard Goewey, president; Richard Brom, vice-president; Jane Frudden, secretary; and Edward Tucker, treasurer.

ASME

"Just look at the mob at that booth! What are the Mechanical Engineers up to this time?" At this year's Engineers Carnival the ASME's achieved the unusual in their booth by providing instructors as targets.

They were ready to outdo their brother engineers in other ways too. They topped other departments in the number of men going on the annual inspection trip, which took them through a variety of plants in Cedar Rapids and the Tri-cities.

President of the Iowa State chapter of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers was Ronald W. Hedin. Assisting him were Merle Lawson, vice-president; Clay Shepard, treasurer; and Clarence Thompson, secretary.

Campus 4-H

"Podunk General Store Hoedown" was the theme of the winter quarter Campus 4-H party. The event was the first of its kind in at least one respect — the 4-H'ers joined hands with the Campus Rural Young People's group in sponsoring it. Decorations and recreation centered around the Podunk General Store theme.

Early in fall quarter the 4-H group entertained freshman boys at a cider sip and freshman girls at an afternoon tea. "Community Living," a talk by Dr. Glenn Hawkes, was the high point of the educational meeting.

Duane Acker was president of the club during the year. Other council members were Joan Strong, Ted Tinkham, Janice Rhodda, Doris Whade, Glen Schmidt, Roger Smith and Thelma Ross.

Concert Band

Practice makes perfect, at least the band members hope.

What! The band outdone? Well, when soloist Sigurd Rascher stepped up before Iowa State's impish musicians and proceeded to play the "Bugle Call Rag" on a saxophone without any keys, that was the end. Even director Piersol stumbled down from the podium in a panic of laughter.

However, as there was fun, so was there the work that made possible the fall "Pop's" concert, the winter formal concert and the spring under the stars festival, not to mention the galivanting tour during spring vacation.

Included in the tour this year was a special "banquet" in Waterloo which featured prose and poetry of many styles, prepared and impromptu.

Rounding out the year were the annual Music Ball and the spring music honors banquet.

Debaters

Righto, governah!

"Resolved that the United Nations is a good international debating society but a poor pattern for world government" was the knotty problem which two British debaters brought to the Iowa State Campus last fall.

Sponsored by the Iowa State Debaters, Alwynn Smith, University of Birmingham and John Gwynn from the University College of North Wales, debated the question with local tongue wagglers James Hirt and Edward Mironchik.

Iowa State emerged victorious from "the battle of words" last spring as its debate teams took first place in the Iowa Forensic Association's annual state tournament.

Winning eight out of nine debates, the ISC debate teams composed of fast talkers Fred Hagedorn, John Schulz, Frank Halden and Richard Stanley captured top honors in debate among the 14 Iowa colleges.

ISC's word-slingers after a battle with the British.

IES

Splat, and another pie went west — right into the face of an eager member of Iowa State's student chapter of the Iowa Engineering Society. Yes, the group's "Engine" carnival booth was a howling success and a prize winner.

Formerly called the GE Society, the group petitioned the Iowa Society for a charter last year. After due consideration on the part of the parent professional, the Iowa State student chapter was then established on the principles of engineering fellowship.

Aiding the treasurer toward filling the group's coffer, the members turned vendors and operated a pop and ice cream stand on the Veishea parade route. Then they rounded out the year's activities with a spring picnic.

They may be successful GE's, but they'll have to try a little harder on some genuine poker faces.

"You say Tom lost his head — which one?"

"Wait a minute, Mother Nature found it."

Strange conversation? Not around the Little Theater where a terrifying three-headed giant was merely a fellow actor on stilts with a papier-mâché head sewed to each shoulder pad.

One of five sections of the Iowa State College Theater, the Iowa State Players was that faction of the student body directly interested in dramatic production. Another allied group of thespians on campus were the laborers for the Laboratory Theater. What's the difference? Well, seems as though, the

Looks like giant doings for the "Cardiff Giant."

Lab Theater presented "new and experimental" plays whereas Players productions were those familiar to all campus theatergoers.

An entirely student-run organization, Players found themselves a veritable UN as members were drafted from all countries, all nationalities and all divisions here at Iowa State. Now wouldn't the students have been surprised if the bulletin board in Beardshear had been adorned with announcements in three or four different languages?

However, arm waving and make-up messing weren't the only avocations of this group. Among other presentations, the organization presented a quarterly series of American and foreign films designed to show the development of the movie industry. Even the most untheatrical of students got laughs out of some of the oldies.

A busman's holiday — this was the trip down to Des Moines to catch the spring production of "Life With Mother" at the Kendall Playhouse — an appropriate ending for a hectic year.

Orchestra

Barry photo

Ass't director Hilligoss waving a stick at the orchestra.

Billiards — any of several games played on an oblong table surrounded by an elastic ledge or cushions, with balls impelled by a cue. Yes, this could have been the definition of the Iowa State Orchestra's fiddlers and tooters tour. The balls — the musicians, the cushions — the itinerary, and the cue — a distinguished stick-waver by the name of Dr. Edgar.

However, hectic as the tour may have been, it was not the only busy part of an orchestra member's year since quarterly concerts in the State Gym kept the group hopping from practice to practice to performance. Also, the orchestra presented for the first time on campus their interpretation of Debussy's difficult "Prelude to the Afternoon of the Faun." President for the year was drummer-man, Ivan "Luke" Warm.

Ninety musicians, a director and some music meant enjoyment for both Iowa State's orchestra members and the student body.

"Have you heard?"

"No, have you heard?"

Heard from whom? The American Institute of Physics, of course. The Physics Club, new on campus this year, concentrated their efforts on gaining membership into this national organization for university students.

Meetings were held weekly at which time speakers from the Physics department presented explanations of current experiments and often illustrated their talks with slides.

Winter Sports Club

"Let's go tobogganing! The Winter Sports Club is renting their toboggans this year."

This is only one way that this club carried out its aim to promote winter sports on campus this year. They also held skating parties, Lake LaVerne permitting.

Once every two weeks the members met in the Union to see movies on sports and to plan the week's party. The year's activities ended with a steak fry spring quarter. Since there was no snow left, they worked up an appetite playing softball.

Student Properties Board

Have you ever had a giant neon face staring at you? Well, if you haven't, it's not the fault of the Student Properties Board.

The board which had its headquarters in the Union operates similar to a private corporation, although it remains under college control. During office hours students checked out such things as floodlights, backdrops and colored bulbs to be used for firesides, skits or programs.

At the monthly business meetings this year the Board discussed the possibility of soon adding a costume renting service, also.

Chairman of the board was John Guernsey, treasurer was Barbara Beebe. Ben Shaefer and Gerald Barger served as faculty advisors.

Serious consideration is really in order for one of the Student Properties Board's deadest props.

SSLA

The Goddess of Pleasure, unofficial patron saint of students had her fling at "Night on the Nile" when SSLA and AIA members presented the annual Beaux Arts Ball.

No, it wasn't a UN convention but Old Pharoah may have been confused when he looked out at the garb of the travelers from many lands. Wandering among the 12 Royal palms, costumed dates could see Egyptian tombs, temples and taverns.

Along the serious line, one of ISC's Student Society of Landscape Architecture's important projects was the organization of landscape architecture clubs in colleges all over the United States. As the first student chapter of the National Society, the club has had a great interest in merging the student and professional groups. Lectures, movies and picnics all acquainted LA students with their subject, their vocation and each other.

Light and serious sides of Social Bureau business — posture emphasis in Union 410; and scheduling events with Mrs. Benson.

Social Bureau

Who are the social wheels on campus? Well, no one really can get right down and name them off on their fingers and toes, but one thing is sure — you will find the background socialites hanging out in the guise of Social Bureau members.

Union 410, theater trips to Des Moines, the junior and senior proms, the Woody Herman concert and the Pammel Court Christmas party — these were some of the activities sponsored by Social Bureau.

Also, in the interest of pep and athletic promotion, the group this year sent Iowa State's marching band on their annual road trip down to help the team in the "Mizzou" haunts.

Heading this group of Social Bureau key-toters this year was Jim Fleming, president.

Social Affairs

"Here's a chance to improve your dancing and maybe learn a few new steps. You might even meet a close second to that fascinating person of your dreams at the Dance Class." — persuasive publicity to prospective dancers.

The Ward System was responsible for the organization of this class held twice a week in fall and winter quarters. The group met in the South Ballroom of the Union. Instruction was open to everyone. Occasionally the group had a dress-up party with refreshments, and of course — dancing.

Greek columns drawn in perspective made a symbolic backdrop for the Panhellenic-Interfraternity Dance. Striking contrasts of the surrealistic cloud against the dark blues of the painted horizon caught the eyes of fraternity and sorority members as they entered the combined ballrooms of the Memorial Union for their annual dance — this year formal and noncorsage.

Gene Krupa's orchestra featured danceable music throughout the evening and presented several performance numbers after intermission.

A sell-out . . . and Iowa State agreed when it heard the voice of Kirsten Flagstad on Sunday evening, January 6. The famous Norwegian soprano presented a solo concert of selections from Brahms, Strauss, Grieg, Wagner and Schubert.

Termed "incomparably the most distinguished of living singers" by the New York Herald Tribune in 1948, Miss Flagstad has sung to sold-out houses in all the major cities in the world. London, Milan, Paris, New York and Chicago have been duly impressed with her greatness.

The large attendance at Miss Flagstad's concert evidenced the fact that Iowa State students recognized a great artist and took advantage of their opportunity to hear in her this distinguished soprano.

Smiling paper snowmen greeted the Wintermezzo goers at the door of Great Hall. A big fellow grinned broadly from his perch on the black backdrop behind Frankie Masters' orchestra.

Every dancer had his favorite step to dance to, for Masters played everything from two-steps to rhumbas and tangos.

"When a Girl Marries" proved to be a popular title for an address opening 1951 Women's Day as a capacity audience filled Great Hall. Dr. Evelyn Millis Duvall, guest speaker and family relations expert, didn't let them down.

Her reassuring approach to the career of making a successful marriage was basic and timely. At an evening banquet honoring campus leaders Dr. Duvall noted the varied jobs open to women of today as compared to those a generation ago.

Bette Augustine, selected as student body president for the day, also spoke at the banquet. A special "Women Are Here To Stay" edition of the Iowa State Daily completed the women's one-day control of the campus. Mortar Board sponsored the program.

A slightly bald gent joked and poked fun with an Iowa State audience. He was Ogden Nash, one of America's most famous writers.

Making fun of his common everyday experiences in his entertaining lecture, he recited many of his peculiar ironic and sarcastic rhymes and couplets. He told of the personal events that led him to writing them.

Nash has written 10 books of poetry and is the co-author of the musical hit, "One Touch of Venus." Prior to writing, he had dropped out of Harvard University after a year — with an affidavit proving this his intention in the first place.

Basketball

The tallest team ever to hit the hardcourts for Iowa State College for some years had more than its share of tough breaks. Yes, the Cyclone cagers were probably the best first-half team in the conference. Fans and players alike soon became quite concerned when it became more the rule than the exception for the cagers to lead until the final portion of the game and then lose by a slim margin. Nine of the seventeen games were determined by six points, and the majority of the time the opponents were the ones that held the vital margin when the game ended.

The mainstays of the team were returning lettermen Sy Wilhelmi, Jim Stange, and Gaylord Anderson. These men piled up the majority of the points scored and were flawless on rebounds. Sam Long showed the most promise of the yearlings.

Finishing sixth out of seven in Big Seven seasonal competition, Iowa State had to be satisfied with a standing that was not representative of the team's potential.

Indoor Track

After weeks of practicing on the indoor oval, the embryo of a team emerged as a full grown chick but never made the rooster stage during competition. The '51 indoor track team was fairly good in all events but was sadly lacking in depth.

The cindermen blazed thru with victories over Drake and Carleton, but could not muster the strength to get by Missouri and Nebraska. The Cyclones' performance at the Big Seven Meet was negligible.

Jerry Broshar captained the squad, while Dickenson, Williams, Case, Miller and Harrison were consistent winners.

630 Club

The 630 Club has fast become one of the more important organizations on campus, since its birth only a few years ago. Founded with the idea in mind of promoting greater interest in sports, the club has succeeded in its primary objective.

The coaching staff and selected 630 members choose the athletes of the week. These athletes are honored with a personal trophy and recognition in the student newspaper. This has done much to arouse interest among the non-athletic minded students.

An "Athlete of the Year" is chosen in winter quarter by the student body.

Casting eyes on the future, the 630 Club has inaugurated a program which enables high school athletes to visit Iowa State College. Conducted tours give a general perspective of college life to these potential ISC students. The club is ever striving to incorporate projects which will make the college student sports conscious.

Swimming

Facing some of the strongest teams in the country, the Iowa State swimming team was able to emerge relatively untarnished. In addition to the successful season of competition the tankers acquired a pocketful of meet, conference, and national records.

Coach McGuire returned to nurture his team through the thick and thin of training and competition. His work finally bore fruit when, after his team won the conference championship, he was thoroughly dunked by the victors.

WAA

WAA Clubs concentrated on individual club projects during the fall and winter.

Dance Club members donned black leotards each Tuesday and Thursday evenings and practiced for their annual dance show, "Barjche." Interpretations of "The Mississippi Suite" and "Manhattan Towers" were included in the show, as well as "So This Is Dance," a humorous satire on ballet, the Can-Can, and the Charleston. Rackets Club members polished up their badminton and table tennis skills for their inter-club tourney. Naiads members were found in the gymnasium pool on Thursday nights working on diving forms and individual ballet numbers for their spring show.

ISA

Highlighting the year's activities of the Independent Student Association was the National ISA Convention at Lawrence, Kansas, the last week in March. Students attending the convention participated in interesting and useful group discussions. Dick Sperring led the delegation as Iowa State's convention chairman.

ISA is an organization for all independent students. Delegates from the Women's Dorms, Ward System, MRA, Tau Gamma and Pammel Court are elected and serve as the ISA Council, the governing body of independent students. The council is also responsible for Tomahawk, activities honorary for sophomore students. Tomahawk is designed to stimulate interest in organizations and activities among independents.

The annual Sweetheart Ball, sponsored by ISA Council, was held February 24 in true nightclub style. The big moment came when blonde Donna Dix was presented as Sweetheart Queen.

Pammel Court — a bundle of tiny homes tucked under the tremendous blanket called ISC.

This miniature town complete with mayor dived into the '50-'51 project of getting playground equipment for tots and grownups. A Social Bureau-financed party at Christmas with toys from Santa caused kiddies' faces to glow.

Inside each house dreams of the future sometimes made the present seem overloaded with school, babies and ironings. But saving factors were bridge games, coffee hours and friendly Pammel neighbors.

Guess the kids really take this television boxing seriously much to father's evident disgust.

Dormitory Council

Revision of "Cues for Coeds," the informative booklet designed to help freshman girls in adjusting to Iowa State life, was the chief project of the Dormitory Council this year. The council, under the efficient leadership of President Sally Stanton, met in the homelike atmosphere of the rooms of the associate director of residence halls, Miss Peisen. In these informal sessions, problems and the general needs of the dorm girls were discussed.

In addition to the "Cues for Coeds" booklet, much attention was focused on the publication of "The Dormer." This is the weekly dorm publication which is a summary of all the current activities and interests of the girls. Janice Wilson was the editor. Each dorm selected a reporter who submitted the important news of her dorm.

Another accomplishment of the council was the constitution change whereby officers would be installed spring instead of fall quarter. This, the council decided, would be beneficial in giving each girl a better understanding of her next year's position.

The new procedure went into effect this year. Membership in the dorm council consisted of the presidents of the seven residence halls, the scholarship and activities council chairman, and the advisory council chairman.

The scholarship and activities council itself consisted of chairmen from each hall. Except for its chairman, who was the connecting link between this council and the dorm council, it too, acted independently of the dorm council. Directing the scholarship and activities was the council chairman, Shirley Hanzelin. The big event this year was the annual Activities Carnival, which was held fall quarter. The Carnival introduced to all freshman girls the activities of the school in which they might participate. Colorful information booths, games, clever posters, and peppy representatives from each activity gave Memorial Union a true carnival spirit.

New this year was the "Dorm Girl of the Week." Each week one girl was selected for her participation in activities, her scholastic achievements, and her winning personality. She was honored by having her picture and personal write-up appear on the bulletin boards of the dormitories. Throughout the year every effort was made to encourage higher scholastic standing for the girls and to increase their participation in activities. It stressed that the freshman year was the time to lay the foundations.

Also meeting independently of the dorm council was the advisory council. Ideas and new rules were carried from the dorm council by chairman Maxine Quass and her assistant, Joyce Williams. The seven vice-presidents of each hall, who act as the chief advisers in their dorms, met together to exchange ideas and solutions to the problems facing the advisers in their work as counselors. A dinner party for all the advisers from all the dorms climaxed a year of work and fun for this council.

Junior Panhellenic Council

Hot chocolate and cookies set the atmosphere for sorority pledge classes at their get-acquainted hours. Sponsored by Junior Panhellenic Council, the chocolate-hour schedule provided for twice-a-month refreshments. Since there were so many pledges, two parties were given simultaneously; the hostess pledge classes were each assisted in entertaining by another class. Remaining classes willingly made up the guest list — being split on the basis of size. The rotation system enabled each group to take its turn as hostess.

Spurred on by the large attendance at their chocolate hours, Junior Panhel then went to work on the idea of opening the Pine Room on Monday afternoon between 4 and 5 for joint social hours with fraternity pledge classes. The fraternity classes thought it was a good idea, too.

Near the close of the school year the 12-member council along with Interfraternity Pledge Council worked with active Panhel and Interfraternity Councils in planning the annual spring formal.

Meetings were held every other Monday at 5 in the Union. The presidency, which is occupied according to a succession plan in which every house takes its turn, was filled this year by Jane Mendon, Chi Omega. Nancy Bartels, Gamma Phi Beta, served as vice-president and Joyce Gray, Kappa Alpha Theta, acted as secretary. Active advisor from Panhellenic Council was Marjorie Moore, Pi Beta Phi.

Panhellenic Council

Outside the night was cold and the snow was blowing. But inside the air was humming with warm chatter as representatives of each of the 11 sororities on campus dined preceding their meeting. The spirit of the 22 members was an excellent example of the Panhel spirit which they have built up at Iowa State.

Panhellenic Council in its bi-monthly Wednesday night meetings also helped lay framework plans for the annual Interfraternity-Panhellenic dance which ushers in spring.

Should it be formal? Corsage or non-corsage? And we must have another good band! Members return to their respective houses with these questions and chapter meetings are made that much longer as the sisters express their sentiment on the issue.

A major council project was the important Panhel Day for which sorority members from adjacent schools came for a workshop on pledge training, rushing, and executive training. Problems common to all groups were discussed and corrective steps recommended.

Panhellenic Council enjoyed their pre-meeting dinners so much that they arranged a "fruit-basket-upset" exchange for their sisters. Nearly all sorority members visited other chapter houses from 6 to 7:30 p.m., and good times were had by everyone — including the few who stayed home to be hostesses.

Council officers were president Mary West, Kappa Kappa Gamma, and secretary Marjorie Larimer, Kappa Alpha Theta.

Interfraternity Council

When the Interfraternity Council got its head in the game, problems — well, most problems, that is — dissolved as easily as a precipitate in its favorite solvent.

It seems every-other-Thursday night was the time for these solutions, for it was then that fraternity presidents, each accompanied by a representative, put their heads together. The gavel-wielders migrated from house to house for their bi-monthly discussions.

President Bill Phelps, Sigma Chi, was bossman over the situation, and it was he who would usually throw the room into a rumble of voices by presenting the subject matter for the group.

Decisions of this year's Council included the re-adoption of the last-war rule whereby pledges were activated after one quarter providing their gradepoint was 2.25 or above.

The conflict between Monday night chapter meetings and campus activities was recognized and steps were taken for the enforcement of the activity-free Monday night agreement.

A rushing pamphlet was prepared by action of the Council. The handbook told rushees what to expect during the fraternity rush period and explained the new dormitory contract.

This formulation of policy, rules, and procedure for fraternities is one of the many reasons for the good spirit existing among the fraternities and between the Greeks and Independents.

Interfraternity Pledge Council

A junior edition of Interfraternity Council, the Pledge Council, met every two weeks to further the similar aims and ideals of their parent organization.

Naturally new blood offers new angles and each problem was attacked with great enthusiasm.

Interest lay in acquainting pledges on campus with each other, familiarizing them with all fraternities and developing a friendly co-operative spirit among Greek residences. The importance of the very basis of this spirit for future years resting in the pledge classes was realized and special plans were made.

The Pledge Smoker was sponsored for this purpose. Held in the Memorial Union, it offered opportunity for all fraternity pledges to meet one another. M. D. Helser, Dean of the Junior College was the principal speaker. He stressed the responsibilities of the fraternal organization in campus activities and their grave duty to maintain the standards of their fraternity and college.

The pledge picnic broadened the scope of this cooperative spirit to include sorority pledges. Each spring the Interfraternity Pledge Council combines efforts with the sorority pledge class presidents to sponsor a picnic. The "Greek Sneak" under the chairmanship of Dave Williams was hailed a success by all who attended. Even rain, inevitable for such an affair, failed to dampen any of the revelry.

Keith Ritter, Phi Delta Theta, officiated as president.

Hard to top this as a candid shot of that dance I had saved 'specially for you. I almost hear dreamy music.

Firesides are taken seriously at the DU house or maybe it just seems that way. Looks like a pleasant party.

Delta Upsilon

"There is a girl, I call her mine" . . . and another of those famous DU pinning serenades was off to a melodious start . . . Who would think that these same boys just captured the Class A football championship . . . The great house on Ash boasts many outstanding personalities . . . Iowa State Daily editor Bill Alford and track captain Gerald Broshar sport the golden pin of the order . . . not to mention President Norm Brown, a Cardinal Key member . . . Representatives on Ag and Vet Council kept the brothers on the "inside" of departmental doings . . . Meanwhile the Iowa Engineer and the Agriculturist relied on DU's for editing and copy . . . 13 men added honorary keys to golden key chains . . . Sextant led the list . . . Varsity participation included track, tennis, and basketball . . . Teke-DU day sported competition in tennis, golf, horseshoes, and softball with a picnic to top it all . . . the Christmas party for Ames children.

FarmHouse

President Deane Rinner and his crew didn't let any grass grow under their feet . . . Tops in scholarship again . . . that constant three point plus house average an enviable record . . . As for activities, the list is long . . . Publications weren't slighted . . . if there were only a printing press in the basement the Agriculturist could be printed right here with Editor Don Button, Managing Editor Daryl Visser, two associate editors and six members of the business staff around . . . MRA

The third year of the well-established house system found Dick Posekany at the helm as president of the MRA.

"November Nocturne" started the fall social season off in fine style. The dancers had a wonderful time dancing to the strains of soft dreamy music, semi-formal style.

Residents of the dear old dorm came back to find that KMRA was now KMRI. Our own radio station had new studios, more powerful equipment, and a long 60-hour schedule. Smooth silky voices of girl disc jockeys caused a rapid increase in the listening audience for the best dormitory radio station in the nation.

Embryo journalists got experience right in the dormitory, reporting, editing, and publishing a four-page weekly newspaper, the Independent. Snappy cartoons, scathing editorials and important news for House residents were gathered together and pieced into a neat mimeographed paper in the Independent's pressrooms.

Full of promise was the fall-quarter all-dorm mixer, where contacts were made for many a successful future date. Replicas of the useful telephone, cut with care from papers of various hues, carried the names and telephone numbers of all who wore them.

Soft lights, mellow music and a big blue and silver backdrop featured the free winter dance, "Symphony in Silver."

Another all-dorm mixer marked the winter quarter and it looked as if these mixers would become a good habit.

Freshman men in Hughes Hall started their college dormitory life in newly painted rooms equipped with new maple desks and bunks.

Clarence Maddy, heading the Security Party ticket, emerged as victor in the winter quarter elections, and received the gavel of president for the coming year.

The "muscle-men" in Friley Hall can keep their muscles in trim and attempt new feats of weight-lifting skill by becoming members of the MRA Weight-lifting Club. An intramural questionnaire distributed last year showed a rather large interest in the sport of heaving those iron weights around. So a special room was set aside, certain interested parties contributed the use of their bar-bells and the Weight-lifting Club was established.

Regular schedules of work-outs are kept by the members and more equipment and better facilities have been promised to these Charles Atlases of Friley Hall.

Still another interesting organization within the MRA set-up is the MRA Toastmasters Club. In this group, men who have shudders of fear run up and down their spine at the thought of having to speak in front of a group at some future time, get good experience in talking before their friends. Five-minute formal talks of preassigned subjects or two-minute extemporaneous talks without preparation are expertly (or inexpertly) analyzed and criticized. All say it is good preparation for that speech course!

Fast games of ping pong offer a chance for relaxation for these men in Harriman House that study intensely.

One of the outstanding features of Wednesday night chow in the Friley Hall Dining Room is the weekly distribution of the MRA newspaper, the Independent. Happenings and functions held for the men of the MRA and views of the men expressed in letters to the editor appear each week.

The MRA had no paper of its own until in the fall of 1947. Leonard Cohn established a weekly paper which he called the Residence Rag. The popularity of the paper required the establishment of a full staff, and the MRA had a weekly paper.

A special headquarters for the gathering of news had been established — an extra-large room for the assimilation of news and the setting up of the layout and publishing of the paper.

The publication board is made up of four men who have had experience in the field of journalism, and excellent critiques are offered on each issue. The editor is responsible for getting the news assembled and typed up on stencils. His biggest help in this job is the managing editor, who sometimes is even found on the end of the crank of an old battered mimeographing machine.

Recently, however, the most modern electric-operated mimeograph machine was purchased by the MRA for the use of the Independent for publishing its paper.

Reporters visit each house and gather news for the paper. A column which tells the proceedings of the MRA Main Cabinet appears each week.

A cartoonist fills the back page with a humor which encompasses college life in a manner which appeals to the student.

Rolf Frankfurter is editor of the Independent, Lynn Millard is managing editor.

Shutterbugs, portrait experts and just anyone interested in the art of photography and a member of the MRA is welcome to join its camera club. Developing equipment, an enlarger and other equipment necessary to turn out negatives and prints are found to be accessible to Camera Club members.

A special room has been set aside for the use of Camera Club members. Experimentation in setting up a model darkroom has provided excellent facilities.

Regular meetings are held in which photos are criticized in a friendly manner and helpful experiences are shared among the members.

Highlight of the year's program is the annual competition in which awards are offered for the best photographic shots.

Why all these smiles? Don't tell me that the wards have elected a female treasurer.

Ward System

Faced with an ever decreasing male enrollment which cut deeply into membership, the Ward System continued to offer its usual opportunities in leadership and its social and athletic programs. Despite this handicap of a shaky world situation the wards can look at their '50–'51 accomplishments with considerable pride.

One of the social highlights of the fall quarter was the wards' giant mixer, the Ward Roundup. Headed by chairman Ev Rogers, the annual event provided a splendid opportunity for Ward members to become acquainted with the women of the dormitories. The men circulated between the dorms — dancing, visiting, and downing cider and donuts for a complete evening of fun and frolic.

Under the capable management of chairman Don Green, the Ward Dance Class completed another successful season. Over 100 fellows and girls enrolled in the class which was held twice weekly throughout fall and winter quarters.

It was decided after several fall issues of the "Ward News" that the paper took more time and money that it was worth to the Ward System, and publication was suspended. Editor Keith Wallace joined Ev Rogers in writing a weekly column in the Iowa State

"Let's be friends!" Informal meetings of students and professors in faculty homes are sponsored by Ward System.

How about a trill to while the after-dinner time away?

Daily called "Ward Words." The column made it possible for Ward members to get the news of their organization much sooner than formerly.

Other notable projects throughout the year included the Veishea concession stand complete with TV, freshman visits to faculty homes, and the persuasive membership drive in fall quarter.

The various councils were the real work horses in the Ward System. They provided a program of activities, events, service, and leadership for their fellow Ward men.

The Intramural Council, headed by Merle Nieman, did its part to give every Ward man a chance to participate in intramural sports. They also initiated a traveling trophy to go to the winner of the annual Ward intramural point race.

Ron Johnson and the rest of the Program Council worked hard to have an interesting program at every Ward meeting. Dancing exhibitions, combat films and quartet singers were some of the entertainment which Ward men enjoyed.

Activities Council, under the guidance of Dan Woolston and later Don Green, strived to get men into campus affairs. Their chief weapon was the application blank. As to their success in producing "wheels," the names of such men as Pownall, Woodburn, Fleming, and others will long be remembered in many phases of campus life.

Treasurer Bob "Pinchpenny" Swanberg and his Secretary-Treasurer Council managed to keep the financial troubles ironed out and the books well balanced.

Social Council brightened the Ward man's life with exchanges, parties, and quarterly firesides. "Belles and Beaus," under the chairmanship of Bob McKenzie, was one of the high spots in the fall social season. The winter quarter fireside, "Hearts-A-Whirl" proved to be equally successful.

Executive Council, led by President Dick Thomas, was the site of many ward-shaking decisions. The men who served on this council deserve much of the credit for piloting the Ward System through another successful year.

Agriculture Division

Agriculture Dean Floyd Andre is never far from his division in body or spirit at his home across from the Dairy Industry building. However, his work as dean doesn't end with the college boundaries or even the Ames city limits. The extension and experiment stations which he directs in addition to supervising undergraduate work have effect on agricultural interests everywhere.

More than 2,000 men were enrolled in the division continuing the highest enrollment since the college was founded. The impending war stir brought uncertainty to the enrollment outlook next fall. The faculty hopes legislators may be changing their attitudes to make agriculture study just as essential as any war-effort work. Using all of the basic sciences, agriculture students have the added job of interpreting and applying their science to worldwide problems of food productions.

Dr. Ray Bryan became acting head of Vocational Education; Prof. John R. Fitzsimmons was named head of Landscape Architecture; Dr. L. M. Thompson is new head of the Farm Operations curriculum; George Browning is new associate head of the experiment station; and Roy Kottman became dean's assistant during the year.

Engineering Division

In line with other engineering colleges in the country, the total enrollment in the Engineering Division has been decreasing here at Iowa State for more than 3 years.

Dean J. F. Downie Smith expressed his concern over the fact that before very long there will be a serious shortage of engineering graduates, which will grow worse for many years to come.

Engineering research activities have been stepped up and the trend should continue. A notable project begun this year was the cooperative program with the Iowa Highway Commission. Iowa State representatives served on the Iowa Highway Research Board and money was allocated by the Commission through the Board to the Experiment Station here for research in the general field of highway construction.

Dean Smith also expected an increase in demand for research by the armed services by next year.

The close cooperation in the Engineering Division is shown by the integration of the three main sections under Dean Smith. The Engineering Extension Service is now working closely with Resident Instruction and the Engineering Experiment Station, so that each is being helped by contact with the others.

Household Equipment

Home Economics Division

The modernized, new look that is appearing in Home Economics Hall reflects the up-to-date outlook of the division's faculty and staff.

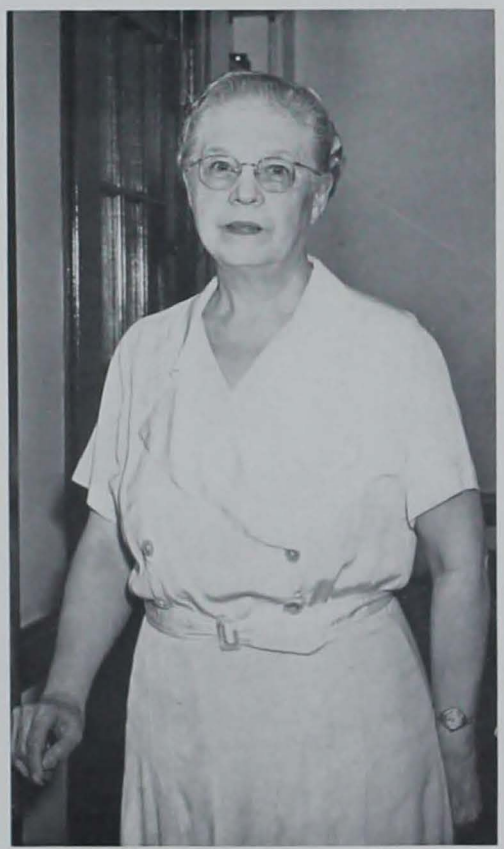

The remodeling began last year on the ground floor with the Institution Tearoom. New equipment, including an all-stainless steel range and three-compartment steamer, was purchased for the kitchen. The repainted dining room boasts new blonde-wood tables and chairs, Mayan-design draperies and complete new sets of silverware and china. A mural by the applied art students is planned for the south wall.

In the east wing, ground floor, the household equipment laboratories were remodeled into four compact rooms.

Future face-lifting plans are centered on the 40-year-old foods labs in the west wing of the building, and four new home management houses in front of the girl's dorms.

Hardly any faculty members were recognizable at the United Nations party when the senior women were entertained by all home economics staff members.

Television plans were uppermost in many staff members' minds. Eighteen shows were presented on films last fall and plans for live TV shows were opening a new field for study.

English and Speech

Science Division

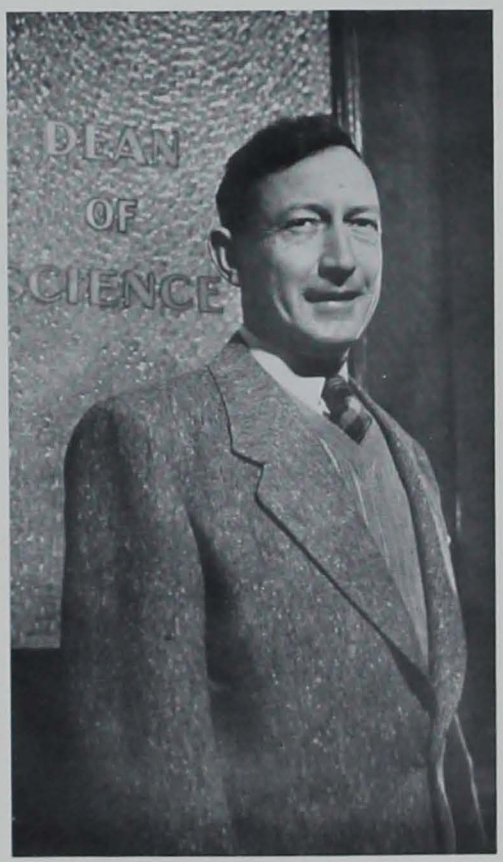

A successful trial year was over for the new science curriculum. Students and faculty alike were enthusiastic about its non-professional phases and training for good citizenship.

The plan was under the guidance of the Science Curriculum Committee headed by Dr. Albert Walker, of the Department of English and Speech. The need for a more flexible curriculum arose from the idea that Iowa State College had the same responsibility as a university in giving students training for personal development and citizenship.

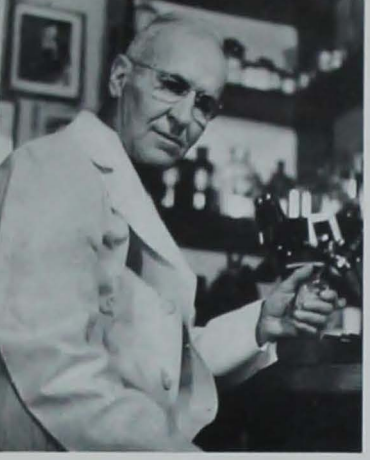

Those who thought that the Division of Science trained students only for strictly technical careers revamped their ideas after seeing the new major in general science that students were taking.

The faculty enthusiastically OK'd the Science Council plan of freshman counseling, illustrating the excellent student-faculty relations in this division. Dean H. V. Gaskill and his assistant, Dr. J. A. Greenlee, were especially pleased with this plan to help them interest freshmen in science majors.

Dr. A. P. Kehlenbeck became the head of Modern Languages during the year. The Statistics Department was under the new leadership of Dr. T. A. Bancroft.

Veterinary Division

It may be the smallest division on campus, but the close-knit Veterinary Medicine Division uses limited numbers to advantage by graduating skilled professional men.

Probably the division is most known on campus for its much-envied honor code, enforced by Veterinary Council. This code governing all student conduct puts men on their honor during examinations, so that no proctor is necessary.

This year's freshman and sophomore classes are the first to be under the new veterinary curriculum, which includes an additional year of pre-professional study. This year allows a broader educational background by giving students better preparation in fundamental subjects.

Student-faculty cooperation extends to social affairs too. Through the Student Chapter of the AVMA, student-faculty parties are sponsored.

The oldest college of veterinary medicine in the United States, the division has been a leader in furthering veterinary medical education and research. Because more students apply for admission than the division could effectively train, first-year students are carefully selected and must meet high entrance requirements.

HENRY D. BERGMAN
Dean of Veterinary Medicine

Agriculture Council

In the Agriculture Division students are making real contributions on five important faculty committees. And much of this success is due to the efforts of Agriculture Council.

Now in its second year, the program of student representation is carried out by the council when they choose ag committeemen who truly represent the interests of the division's undergraduates.

Freshman ag students are given a chance to meet and chat informally with faculty at the Freshmen Reception each fall. This get-together gives the faculty a chance to make new students feel at home.

At the Ag Banquet this year Mr. Carl Hamilton, editor and publisher at Iowa Falls addressed the group on "A Philosophy for a College-Trained Man in 1951."

The council honored student leaders and gave new students an idea of departmental activities when they sponsored the Agriculture Convocation February 28. Agriculture leaders in athletics, publications, judging teams, student government and all phases of campus life inspired freshmen and new students and provided another student-faculty social affair.

President Al Korslund and vice-president John Nelson both took time out from council duties for weddings during the year. Council secretary was Carl Anderson, and Russell Swanson was treasurer. Faculty adviser, Prof. L. M. (Red) Thompson, head of the Department of Farm Operations, succeeded Prof. A. B. Caine, whose death last fall ended his long council advisership.

Engineering Council

Twice this year engineers invaded Memorial Union en masse. In November they used noise, laughs and plenty of confetti streamers to attract crowds to their Engineer's Carnival. Each department competed for booth prizes and tried to outdo Rube Goldberg with intricate bean bag tosses and similar games of "skill."

To show their versatility in entertaining, engineers changed the mood for their annual formal dance in April. The Engineer's Lady and her two attendants were introduced at intermission. Engineering Council continued its practice of sponsoring the Guard of Saint Patrick and selected the men to be initiated into the organization the night of the dance.

These two activities were the most-heard-about work of Engineering Council. But many more projects aided the council's purpose of coordinating the varied departmental clubs and activities.

A display from engineering departments and "propaganda" about the division greeted freshmen at the annual reception sponsored by the council during rush week last fall.

The 22 members of the council represented the nine departmental clubs in the division and the Iowa Engineer. Two council members were on Cardinal Guild.

Officers of the council were Jack Thorson, president; Bob Vanderhart, vice-president; Dean Houston, secretary; and Sam Woodburn, treasurer. Harry Breckmeyer, of the Department of Ceramic Engineering was adviser.

Home Economics Council

More coordination between home economics departments was gained this year in Home Economics Council activities.

Always "on the run" were Lois Smith, president; Jean Morrison, vice-president; Nancy McPheeters, secretary; and Barbara Beebe, treasurer; plus more than 20 departmental council members.

Joint projects helped all home ec women to know each other better. In October the council helped with a tea for foreign students in observance of United Nations Day. The catering class made cookies from 12 different nations to add to the color of the occasion for the 450 people who attended.

Profits from the Home Economics Ball in November went to two scholarships for junior women. Approximately 650 couples danced to Elliot Lawrence's music at the annual formal dance.

On Home Economics Day the council sponsored a skit telling what the ten departmental clubs do during the year. The afternoon program honored early Iowa State leaders in home economics and Miss Florence Fallgatter, present head of the Department of Home Economics Education.

To help advertise Iowa State and home ec as a major, the council sent students with faculty members to high school career day programs near Ames.

On Women's Day in February, Home Ec Club and Science Women's Club sponsored a talk by Miss Evelyn Girard, a member of the Women's Specialized Medical Corp of the Army. She told women of the advantages of army life for a college graduate.

Science Council

There can be a lot of confusion among freshmen enrolled in a division which offers such varied majors as chem technology and modern languages. This year Science Council started work on a solution to freshman curriculum problems.

Programs which told about science majors and suggested minors were presented to new students. The council's counseling service was cited with praise from the science dean and faculty.

Headed by President Esther Morledge, the council sponsored the annual Science Dance, Wintermezzo, during winter quarter. Other council officers were Jack Grant, vice-president; Janet Supernois, secretary; Charles Birdsall, treasurer; and Jeannette Fowler, publicity. Dr. Albert Walker of the Department of English and Speech, was faculty adviser.

Also under the council's supervision was the Iowa State Scientist, now beginning its fourth year as a campus divisional publication.

To make science students feel that their opinions meant something the council helped bring undergraduate ideas to the dean's attention.

At a special ceremony last spring Dean Harold V. Gaskill presented awards to the outstanding seniors in the Division of Science. The honor, based on scholarship and service to the division, was given to David Garfield, Mildred Bretnall, Thomas English, Bruce Holl, Elaine Rexroat, Edwin Sidey and Arvid Zuber.

Veterinary Council

Veterinary Council members have a three-fold contact job — with students, faculty and alumni, and the national AVMA chapter.

To accomplish their job with students the council meets before Junior AVMA meetings to plan the program; establishes a budget consistent with dues and other income; and verifies eligibility of nominees for offices in the student chapter.

Another council job is to act in case of violations of the division code of honor. Chapter diplomas are presented by council, as are junior keys and freshman identification badges. The selection of the recipient of the AVMA Auxiliary Service Award is also handled by council vote.

Committee heads as well as the Vet Medicine Ball chairman are approved by the council.

The council, established in 1926 when the Junior AVMA chapter became a part of the national organization, is elected on a semester basis (one and a half quarters). This follows the practice on the 16 other veterinary college campuses in the United States.

John Bricker headed the council this year, with Roland Bunge, vice-president; Fred Husmann, president-elect; Gordon Esbeck, secretary; Leonard Cavanaugh, treasurer; Burman Wright, critic. Two Cardinal Guild representatives, four class delegates and officers of the Student Chapter of the AVMA served on the council.

Dr. Oliver W. Whitcomb, of the Department of Veterinary Surgery, served all year as faculty adviser.
