300 Miles of Streets Built by W P A

Authorities in small towns and cities of Iowa planned and sponsored the building of many new, much needed streets the past year as constructive WPA work which would provide employment for hundreds of able bodied men certified as local relief workers. The result is that numerous communities have acquired newly widened, graded or lowered streets repaved with brick, gravel or cement. The above view is of one such job in Albia. Altogether approximately 300 miles of new street paving has been done by WPA in Iowa this year. In addition, about five miles of new curb and eleven miles of cement sidewalk have also been constructed statewide by WPA as substantial and material improvements in benefited communities.
